France Looks Ahead
Snake and Spider
No Bonus? No Cancellation
The Restless Philippines

—By Arthur Brisbane—

BERLIN SAYS FRANCE is arranging to lend one hundred million yen, Japanese money, to the new "republic" of Manchukuo, where a Chinese puppet governs in the interest of Japan.

Japan would guarantee the loan. Germans believe that France considers it important to help Japan establish a strong position on the southern boundaries of Russian Siberia.

Tragic happenings in Charles, Ill. Scientists watched a 6-inch garter snake held prisoner in the web of a black spider. The spider had wrapped its silken ropes, much stronger in proportion to size than any steel cable made by man, around the snake's head. For 24 days, the snake, had struggled vainly to escape.

The spider, apparently not strong enough to kill the snake, had daily wrapped more spider web around it.

Kind "cruelty to animals" sympathizers protest. Science says the spider was entitled to prove what he can do. It's a small male spider, of the interesting kind that, according to Fabre, French naturalist, enjoys a dangerous honeymoon. The female usually kills and devours him when the honeymoon is over, and sometimes before it starts. Therefore, he would seem to have trouble enough without interference by "cruelty" people.

The convention of veterans attacks the War Department and objects to sending free, through the postoffice, speeches by Secretary Hurley criticizing the B. E. F.

President Hoover tells veterans and the public the bonus cannot be paid because the country and taxpayers can't possibly afford it.

This opinion should make it certain that the government will not consent to cancellation of European debts. If the United States cannot afford two and one-quarter billions for its own soldiers it can hardly afford ten billions for soldiers, taxes and the operations of other nations.

Certain of our fellow Americans in the Philippines seem uncertain as to their desires. Recently they have been telling us they would separate from the United States entirely, to be free and independent. Then it occurred to some that if they did that, they would not be able to send sugar and other products here without paying duty, also that they would have nobody to build roads and public schools for them.

Now Guillermo Capadocia, from the island of negroes, says: "We want to run the Americans out of the Philippines."

Simultaneously, he, with 500 associates waving red flags, carrying banners reading "Long live the Soviet Republic," "Demand a cash dole, payable weekly." It is a complicated situation there.

Young ladies that write for newspapers discuss the importance of a college degree in life's struggle. Unless the world is changed, such a degree ought not to be ABSOLUTELY necessary.

Hypatia had no college degree, but she created a college of her own, and made such a success of it that competitors found it necessary to behead her. Bertha, mother of Charlemagne; Nancy Hanks, mother of Lincoln; George Eliot, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Rosa Bonheur, the mother of Edison, had no college degree.

The British are wise. Gandhi, whose sincerity enables him to rule the minds of millions in India, says to the British: "I shall starve myself to death if you don't do so and so." Wise Britain replies: "You must decide about that, but you will not starve to death in our prison." The British tell Gandhi that he may leave prison and fast or starve at his leisure somewhere else. The wise man knows when to give way.

Ortiz Rubio, recently President of Mexico, has a plan to diminish our over-supply of workers. Through a representative of Universal Service who visited him in Mexico City, Mr. Ortiz Rubio invited the United States to send to Mexico all Mexican workers now in the United States, and any others here of Latin origin. He says Mexico will supply all such workers with government land sufficient to enable them to earn a living for themselves, and thinks this would relieve the strain on our employment facilities.

This country could offer plenty of land to all those Mexicans and Latins and millions more, land now not occupied. But for some reason, people in the United States are not able to support themselves on a piece of land, as in Mexico and a hundred other countries.

Storm Floods City Streets

STALLS AUTOS AND FILLS CELLARS

Heavy Rain Drives Along the Coast; Is Expected to Last Into Tonight

Rain, driving along the coast in a steady downpour, stalled automobiles on roads all around Greater Boston, flooded cellars and basements and drenched pedestrians today.

All along the Northern artery, Southern artery, Revere Beach blvd., Pilgrim parkway and other main roads through Greater Boston, automobiles were stalled with ignition systems drenched by the beating rain.

Pools of water in Columbia rd., near Quincy st., were up to the hubs of cars and machines passing under the railroad bridge there were deluged as spray broke over their windshields.

At the same time storm warnings were posted at all weather stations from Eastport, Me., to the Virginia Capes and the forecasters estimated the downpour would not cease until late tonight.

In Eastern ave., Revere, the basement of the Revere Rubber Co. was under 12 inches of water. Cellars in the district were flooded with rain up to two or three feet.

Ouimet Tied at 18; Jesse Routed

Five Farms Course, Baltimore Country Club, Sept. 15 (AP)—Ross (Sandy) Somerville led 6 up over Jesse Guilford, the hard-hitting Boston veteran, in the first 18 holes of their 36-hole semi-final match in the United States amateur golf championship today.

Somerville was only 2 up at the turn, but took advantage of Guilford's wildness as well as his own putting chances to take four more holes, including the last three in succession.

JESSE PUTTS POORLY

The Canadian holed an eight-footer for a birdie on the 18th. Big Jesse's booming drives were offset by his poor approaching and poorer putting.

Francis Ouimet and Johnny Goodman finished their morning round all even. Ouimet, the defending champion, had a two-hole lead at the seventh, but lost it on the incoming nine when his famous put-

With the [illegible] day of Civil [illegible] tree jewelers [illegible] state militia, redoubled their efforts to find the body of his missing wife, Edith, who police assert was murdered. DuBois insisted she and two friends were killed in an auto accident and her body was cremated.

DuBois' suicide was viewed as the last of an amazing series of circumstantial clues, all pointing toward him as the slayer.

COUPLE IDENTIFIED

Again today evidence against him cropped up at every turn of the investigation—all insufficient to substantiate a murder charge, however, without the missing corpus delicti.

Authorities viewed the suicide of the man they had been forced to release—because there was no

BULLET SEALS LIPS OF CHIEF ACTOR IN TRAGEDY; GIRL'S PHOTO NEAR

Charles DuBois, husband of Edith DuBois, woman whose disappearance is the most baffling mystery in years and whose body has not been found, committed suicide today in Quincy.

DuBois put a .32 calibre bullet through his head in a lodging house at 1079 Hancock st., Quincy, at 11 o'clock this morning.

With the secret of his wife's tragic end still locked in his heart, he died an hour later at Quincy Hospital.

A newspaper picture of Grace Atwood, 25, the wealthy Middleboro girl he planned to marry, the third person in the love triangle, was found in his pocket as his life was ebbing.

Although DuBois, dying, would not talk, police are seeking every possible confession at every place to which he had access.

The picture of Grace Atwood in his pocket revealed his identity to Patrolman James MacKay on the way to the hospital.

DuBois was too far gone. He made no answer.

FRANCE MAY END BAN ON HEARST

Paris, Sept. 16 (AP)—There was a report today in the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies that Jean Renaitour, a member of the chamber, had recommended that Premier Herriot lift the ban of exclusion imposed two years ago on William Randolph Hearst, American publisher.

M. Renaitour saw Mr. Hearst during the Olympic games in Los Angeles.

On Sept. 2, 1930, William Randolph Hearst was served with an official request to leave France. The Surete Generale, Scotland Yard of France, in announcing the service of the order said the French government "has always expelled foreigners who are consistently hostile to France."

The Surete described Mr. Hearst as a Franco-phobe and asserted that it was preferable that he do his criticising of that country outside of France.

AMERICAN'S SCOOP BROKE DuBOIS TALE

Tearing down of Charles DuBois' story of the supposed accidental death of his wife in a continuing, daily series of noticeable newspaper scoops by the Boston Evening American has brought about a probable quick clearing up of this astonishing mystery.

The discovery yesterday by the Evening American of the whereabouts in Lunenburg, N. S., of Mrs. Ruth Butler—claimed by DuBois to have been killed in the same accident in which he said the missing woman died, was the final blow that brought him face to face with a situation impossible for him to explain, even though his wife's body was still unfound and the police could not arrest him. Mrs. Butler, in an exclusive interview with the American, denied having been on any trip with Mrs. DuBois, and, naturally, after branding DuBois as a liar, denied she was dead.

The American's exclusive discoveries and resultant publicity completely broke down DuBois' story. State Detective Michael Fleming today called the American's efforts in the case "an amazing course of newspaper publicity with a tremendous psychological effect."

Pinchot Defends Bonus Army Conduct in Pennsylvania

New York, Sept. 16 (US)—An official report on the conduct and personnel of the remnants of the bonus expeditionary forces, as they moved through Pennsylvania after being evicted from Washington by army tanks, bayonets, tear gas and torch, was made public today by direction of Gifford Pinchot, Progressive Republican governor of Pennsylvania.

It was a direct refutation to the charges of Atty.-Gen. Mitchell, who had called the veteran army the "largest number of criminals ever assembled together in the city of Washington."

PRAISED FOR RESTRAINT

The report, praising the B. E. F. for its restraint and discipline was made by J. Prentice Murphy, member of the Pennsylvania State welfare commission and released in New York by Amos R. E. Pinchot, brother of the governor, at his office.

After telling how orderly the ex-soldiers had acted after reaching Johnstown, Pa., the report wound up with this statement:

"The B. E. F. is pretty much a cross section of the citizenry of the whole country. These people need sympathy and understanding.

"We are going to avoid trouble, according to the extent to which those qualities of character and intelligence are expressed by public and private officials and citizens in general."

EVICTION "HORROR"

Murphy wrote that the experience in Washington, when the veterans fled before cavalry and tanks, remained a horror in the minds of those with whom he talked. He said they called it "a real war"—"a dreadful night."

The veterans, ousted from Washington, were invited to Ideal Park, outside of Johnstown, by Mayor Edward McCloskey, and it was there

PROBE ELECTION STOCK SLUMP

New York, Sept. 16 (INS)—The Stock Exchange today launched an investigation into the recent slump in stock prices immediately following the Maine election.

Monday election day, Sept. 12, market broke 4.21 points in the Dow Jones industrial price average. The next day the decline was extended 2.48 points and on Wednesday the loss was 3.97.

According to rumors in Wall Street, some private wires forecast the Republican setback before the close of the market Monday when accurate forecasts were impossible since the polls were still open.

DEMOCRATS READY TO DROP SMITH AS CAMPAIGN AID

MAINE VICTORY TERMED PIVOT IN CAMPAIGN

Party Leaders See Endorsement as an Aid to the Ticket in East

By LOUIS SEIBOLD

New York, Sept. 16—The managers of the Roosevelt campaign are not greatly apprehensive now over the refusal of "Happy Warrior" Al Smith to play the game according to ancient Democratic rules.

Eastern leaders naturally hope Smith will stop sulking and indorse the Roosevelt-Garner ticket on a 100 per cent basis. They believe that by doing so Smith can instantly put a stop to factional disputes that seemed to menace the national ticket until very recently.

INDIFFERENT TO SMITH

Western and southern leaders appear to be becoming rapidly indifferent to Smith's political plans. They don't appear to care very much what he does.

Some southern leaders who have heard their states into the Democratic corral again, would be satisfied if Smith continued his eloquent silence. Some report considerable dissatisfaction in their respective localities over the frank and open morals made by Roosevelt to entice his old pal and political patron up toward the firing line.

These men do not share the belief of Smith's extreme partisans in the east that Smith is essential to Democratic success.

In taking this position, they imagine the survival of the hostile sentiment in the southern states that resulted in Virginia, North Carolina, Florida, Texas, Kentucky, Tennessee and Oklahoma (normally Democratic) throwing their electoral votes to Hoover.

FEAR SMITH PRICE

Another reason for the Southern viewpoint is that if Smith finally consents to the importunities of Roosevelt and other Northern Democrats, he will demand a price wholly out of proportion to the actual value of any services that he could render.

In other words, Southern and, to some extent, Western leaders are suspicious to eliminate Tammany influence and are skeptical of the outcome of any deal Smith might demand as the price of his support. What they have in mind is the possibility of Smith being invited by Roosevelt to accept a place in the cabinet, he elected to a position of confidence, like Mr. Roosevelt's election.

A significant development in the Democratic campaign since the tremendous increase in the Democratic primary vote is the diminishing volume of requests that funds be urged to make speeches in several parts of the country.

Only a few weeks ago, such requests came from every part of Northern and a great many of the Western States. That is not the case. Democratic leaders responsible for the demands for Smith's help seem to have definitely made up their minds that he is going to continue to sulk. Another measure of their present comment is that the party can win without Smith.

BRIBERY PROBE INVOLVES NEW LOWELL CASES

Atty. Downey, Police Chief's Son and Three Officers Held as Inquiry Is Extended

Lowell, Sept. 16—Investigation of other alleged bribery cases, with other principals, has been opened, it was learned today, as the aftermath of indictments returned against the son of Lowell's police chief and against a Lowell restaurateur and two Dracut policemen.

Hugh F. Downey, an attorney and the police chief's son, with the other three, are held in $2000 each for trial, following pleas of not guilty to indictments charging conspiracy to consummate a bribe.

The quartet were arraigned in Middlesex Criminal Court yesterday on secret indictments based on an alleged attempt to extort $100 from an autoist charged with drunken driving. The latter, Joseph Hamilton, of Marlboro, refused to pay and was convicted in Lowell District Court. He appealed.

In addition to Downey those arraigned were Patrolmen William F. Conole and William Eagan, of the Dracut police, and John Sousa, of Lowell.

The state contends that on August 13 an auto party, returning from the State American Legion convention at Lawrence, was stopped by Conole in Dracut and that because the driver did not have a license, Hamilton, a member of the party, took the wheel.

Hamilton was arrested for drunkenness and was later charged with operating under the influence of liquor. He retained Downey as counsel, and the latter said the police might ha "reached" by an offer of money. Downey is later alleged to have told Hamilton the police wanted $100.

CHILDREN CALM IN PLANE CRASH

By MRS. BLANCHE HUTCHINSON

(Copyright, 1932, by International News Service, Inc.)

Angmagsalik, Greenland, Sept. 15—I am writing this from the hospital at Angmagsalik, where the children and I are receiving every care.

As soon as we landed here Miss Roos, a Danish nurse, doctored us and put us to bed. Kathryn was very ill with a bad cold, but Janet Lee and I were all right.

Today we all are feeling fine. Kathryn's cold is much better and the rest of us are thankful to be alive after our terrible experience. Kathryn's chief worry is for her doll, which she lost overboard when our plane was wrecked.

Janet Lee kept a firm grip on hers, however, and now she is anxious to buy new clothes for it. The children are begging their father to buy a new plane so we can finish our flight to Europe, but there is none here.

The children behaved splendidly while we were shipwrecked. They helped to carry stones to build a wall to keep out the snow and wind, and helped carry the cushions and things we saved from the plane up the steep rocky cliffs.

We salvaged a quart of champagne from the wreckage of our plane, and the eight of us shared it as we huddled together, trying to keep warm. When we sighted the lights of the Lord Talbot Monday night, we all wept wild with excitement.

Plane Victim's Body Here

The body of Stanley G. Kulp, Brooklyn, N. Y., salesman, who was killed in an aeroplane crash at Belfast, Me., two days ago, arrived in Boston on the S.S. Camden today and transferred to an undertaking parlor.

LEGION LINES UP TO ENFORCE ITS PROGRAM

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 16 (INS)—The American Legion, its 14th annual convention adjourned, stood pledged today to repeal of prohibition, cash payment of the bonus and unlimited war upon entangling international alliances.

The Legion, under the reign of Louis A. Johnson, of West Virginia, new national commander, will direct the influence of its nation-wide organization and 960,000 members to secure this legislative program. Johnson gave it his hearty endorsement.

FIGHT DRY LAW

The prohibition stand, taken by the Legion, was brief and to the point. The legionnaires said:

"We favor the immediate repeal of the national prohibition act, and the submission to the several states by Congress of an enabling resolution repealing the eighteenth amendment."

This went further than either the Republican or Democratic platforms.

On the bonus, the Legion declared for "full and immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates" and directed its national officers to "proceed before Congress toward enactment of this legislation."

SILENT ON RIOTS.

It was silent on the bonus riots in Washington, a resolution censuring President Hoover for using troops against the veterans there, having been killed in committee.

The convention itself took only one vote involving the riot issue. It was to protest against the use of a government frank on War Department envelopes, used by messengers in distributing a statement by Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley explaining the government's position.

At the request of Dist. Atty. Cregg of Lawrence an autopsy was performed by Medical Examiner Francis W. Anthony of Haverhill.

Chief of Police Donahue of Merrimac and State Detective Murray of Lynn left today to hunt the doctor. She had been employed in the office of the State Hospital at Danvers for over a year.

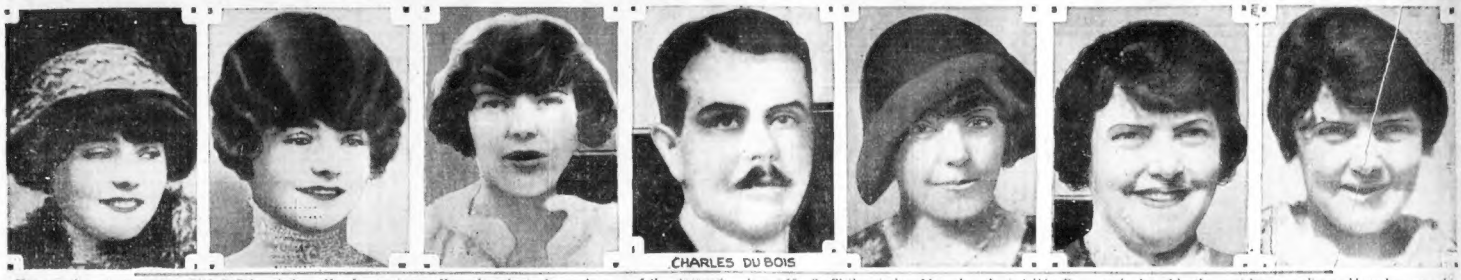
DEATH STEPS IN TO TAKE HAND IN DUBOIS LOVE MYSTERY



Here are six portraits of Mrs. Edith DuBois, missing wife of Charles DuBois, who ended his own life today in a triangle mystery. Her whereabouts is proving one of the strangest puzzles police have coped with in years. She was last seen on August 10. Conflicting stories of her whereabouts told by DuBois caused neighbors to notify police. DuBois was arrested and released by the court because police could produce no evidence of murder. Now DuBois is dead. Where is his wife?

DuBois Planned for Year to Wed Grace

Middleboro, Sept. 16—Charles DuBois and Grace Atwood planned their marriage a year before the disappearance of DuBois' wife, according to a statement made today by Asst. Dist. Atty. John V. Sullivan, in charge of the probe of the great Herring Pond mystery.

This was one of the disclosures relative to Sullivan's lengthy examination of the husband who today shot and killed himself as the police net was tightening around him.

During his questioning Monday by Sullivan, DuBois denied at first that he was in love with Miss Atwood, nonchalantly remarking:

"Oh, Grace was just another woman in my life."

When pressed, however, he admitted that he was infatuated with the girl and planned to marry her.

SULLIVAN'S STORY

These and other new details of his "third degree" by the officials were made public today by Sullivan, who was confined to his home in Middleboro with a cold.

"If Grace Atwood hadn't written that letter to DuBois while he was working in the garden at his Plymouth camp," Sullivan said, "her name might never have been linked with this tragedy.

"Discovery of that love letter gave a new complexion to the entire case. It expressed the impulsive feeling of a young and romantic girl. When we read the lines 'You know how I love you and how we shall be together forever,' it furnished an angle of the highest importance to our inquiry."

RELUCTANT WITNESS

"But I found DuBois to be a reluctant witness. He was so noncommittal about the Grace in the case that I said t ohim, 'What you are doing is to assent to facts which you know I possess, but you are not volunteering any information.'

"It was some time before he would tell me Grace's name or what their relations were.

"'Is she your sweetheart?' I asked him.

"'What do you mean by 'sweetheart'?' he asked.

"'Why the girl you loved, of course,' I answered.

"'Oh,' he said, 'I thought you used the term in the lighter sense as it is commonly used.'

"'Do you love Grace Atwood?,' I asked.

"'She is just another woman in my life,' was his reply.

"DuBois didn't know that we had Grace's letter or he might have been more candid at the start.

ADMITS THEIR LOVE

"After more questioning on the subject, he finally admitted that he loved Grace Atwood and planned to marry her.

"'But you were a married man with a wife,' I said to him.

"'Yes, but there had been no love between me and my wife for a year; Grace and I discussed our marriage plans for fully a year,'" he answered.

"I am satisfied that there was forgery in the transfer by DuBois of his wife's property but we must compare handwriting with two deeds in a strong box in the Tuckahoe, N. Y., Bank before making the final check-up. In order to prevent DuBois or sy agent from removing these deeds from the strong box I had a stop order put through the Tuckahoe Court today."

Mrs. Ruth Butler of Foxboro, supposed to have been the woman named by Charles E. DuBois as one of the companions of his wife on a fatal trip he said she made to Montreal, but now revealed as very much alive. Mrs. Butler, an actress, now playing at Lunenberg, N. S., has directed police to search the grounds of her Foxboro home for the missing body in the strange mystery. She was found yesterday by the Boston Evening American

SHEET PRESENTS NEW CLUE IN MYSTERY

A sheet taken from the DuBois cottage at Plymouth is examined by State Troopers Olsen and Meissner, who attached significance to the fact several holes had been cut and new material sewed on. DAY LAYS RAIL TRAFFIC LOSS TO HIGH RATE

Providence, Sept. 16—In an address to members of the New England Shippers' Advisory Board at the Biltmore hotel today, William H. Day, manager of the transportation bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, discussed traffic that has left the railroads and some reasons for the shift in means of transportation.

Day's talk was an informative one, in which he detailed recent transportation trends. He showed that although much of the traffic loss to railroads could be laid to present economic conditions, a large volume of traffic was being shipped by water and truck because of cheaper rates.

Wool growers in the West, he said, found it cheaper to send wool destined for New England to the Pacific coast by truck, where it was routed by ship through the Panama Canal cheaper than it could have been sent across the country by rail.

Coal and ice shipments by rail have fallen off considerably due to the introduction of oil burners and electric refrigerators, he pointed out.

In the case of most other goods, Mr. Day declared that shippers found trucks to offer a cheaper rate than railways. More than 400 trucking concerns with a total of 2819 trucks are operating in Boston, he said, to give some idea of the inroads made on railroad traffic.

AVIATRIX WINS HEIGHT MARK

Paris, Sept. 16 (INS)—Maryse Hilz, French aviatrix, today was officially credited with a new world's altitude record for women, formerly held by Ruth Nichols, of the United States.

The International Aeronautical Federation, whose stamp of approval is the world standard of aviation records, credited Mlle. Hilz with a height of 9,793 meters, or about 31,900 feet, for her flight of Aug. 19.

Spider Wins 24-Day Battle to Death Against Snake

Pittsburgh, Sept. 16 (AP)—A long-day battle between a spider of the ordinary household species and a six-inch garter snake, held fast in a web spun by the spider, ended today in death for the reptile.

The life and death struggle occurred in the basement of the home of W. F. Miller at Monroville. Miller said the spider skips up and down a silken cord, biting again and again at the snake, unaware of his victory.

A single silken rope enmeshed the snake when it arrived in the cellar 24 days ago. As the snake attempted to gain freedom the spider spun a dozen other fibers around it until the snake dangled helplessly in a net stretched from the wall to a bottle.

The final duel began when the spider completed the trap. After two days of frantic maneuvering, the snake, exhausted, ceased to struggle.

Burlingame, Cal., Sept. 16 (AP)—Not all snakes and spiders get along as badly as the St. Charles, Ill., pair.

Burlingame police pointed to a black spider and a grass snake in a bottle on a desk at headquarters. They have lived together for three days and still "no contest."

Police Seek Visitor

Police throughout New England were asked to locate L. W. Reger of Lehighton, Pa., today to notify him that his father is dead.

How Nominees Stand In Nation-Wide Poll

Washington, Sept. 16—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nationwide Presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in cooperation with all other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

It also shows the majority each candidate has in each State in which he is leading.

In addition, it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each State, as compared with the last preceding report from the State. These State reports are usually a week apart.

The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each State where he has improved his position, as compared with the last preceding report from that State.

ROOSEVELT BOOSTS LEAD

By COLE E. MORGAN

Washington, Sept. 16 (US)—New returns today in the nationwide presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States shows:

2—Roosevelt cut down Hoover's advantage in Ohio.

HOOVER LEAD SLASHED

In Pennsylvania, Roosevelt's lead jumped from 31 to 53 per cent of the ballots. Indiana, which last week showed him with 54 per cent, now gives him 55. Last week Ohio gave Hoover 53 per cent. Today he has now 52. Both weeks Michigan has divided at 52 per cent for Roosevelt. The Illinois figures from the outset have shown Roosevelt leading with 60 per cent or more of the total.

The fact that Roosevelt is able to maintain these leads in such normally Republican states as Pennsylvania and Michigan, and such always debatable states as Indiana and Illinois, and is holding Hoover down close to a 50-50 division in Ohio, should lend encouragement to the Democratic nominee.

MAJORITY IN ILLINOIS

Of 14,178 poll ballots tabulated from Illinois, Roosevelt has a 2906 majority. He has a majority of 758 with 14,004 recorded from Pennsylvania. Indiana gave Roosevelt a majority of 866 out of 9856. He has a 394 majority out of 10,138 in Michigan.

A week ago Hoover's Ohio majority stood at 456 with 8916 ballots tabulated. Today with 11,570 votes, Hoover's majority slumped to 378.

Out of 218,091 ballots for the entire country, Roosevelt has a popular majority of 37,027. This is a net gain over Hoover of 6231 votes.

LAUDS ACCURACY OF HEARST POLL

New York, Sept. 16 (INS)—Newspaper polls, such as the one now being conducted by the Hearst newspapers, provide the most accurate election forecasts. A study of "straw votes" published today by the Columbia University Press declares.

Politicians are second and political reporters third in accuracy, says the author, Claude E. Robinson, former Gilder Fellow in sociology at Columbia.

MOST ACCURATE

The most accurate nation-wide poll ever held in this country was the Hearst newspaper poll of the presidential election of 1928, which predicted the Hoover plurality with an average error per state of only five votes per hundred cast, an all-time high for national prediction accuracy, the survey declared, Robinson comments.

"There are shown some very remarkable predictions. On the face of the straw returns alone, without interpretative correction, the Hearst newspapers forecast the 1928 presidential pluralities in 46 states with an average error of only 5 per cent.

"In 33 of the 46 states in which the Hearst canvas was conducted, the plurality prognostication was in error 1 per cent or less, which is virtually perfect prediction."

Robinson asserts that the proportion of the total official vote polled by Hoover and Smith was predicted correctly to within less than 3 per cent for the two major candidates. The Literary Digest national poll was second only to the Hearst newspapers in accuracy, Robinson says.

QUAKE DAMAGES NEW ZEALAND

Wellington, New Zealand, Sept. 16 (INS)—A severe earthquake shook a sixty-mile area surrounding Hastings, Napier, Gisborne and Wairoa today, thrusting the entire population into panic.

Many of the buildings which were damaged in the earthquake of 1931 collapsed under the strain.

Hundreds of chimneys and walls fell in Gisborne, including the wall of the Anglican church there. The postoffice and other buildings were badly cracked.

The quake also made huge cracks in the roads about Wairoa, where bridges collapsed and the water supply was interrupted.

BAY STATE'S 17 FOR ROOSEVELT, SAYS PETERS

New York, Sept. 16 (AP)—Jesse I. Strauss, president of the Roosevelt Business and Professional League, announced today that Frank L. Polk, former under-secretary of state, had accepted the chairmanship of the league's lawyers' division.

The Straus announcement, issued from Democratic national headquarters, said that Polk would begin at once organizing lawyers throughout the country in support of the presidential candidacy of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

A statement fy former Mayor Andrew J. Peters of Boston was issued at Democratic headquarters in which Peters predicted that Massachusetts would give its 17 electoral votes to Roosevelt in November.

"It is a significant fact," the Peters' statement read, "that a large number of disappointed and dissatisfied Republicans are openly announcing their purpose to vote for Gov. Roosevelt. Massachusetts has always responded to the spirit of liberalism and will do so again at the approaching election. There is in all New England states a liberal sentiment to which the principles of the Democratic party and the party's nominees make a strong appeal.

"It may be a good rule 'not to change horses in mid-stream,' but you have to do so if the horse lies down."

The middle west is behind him, and he feels he has every reason to be satisfied with Democratic prospects in those states. The northwest and the far west lay ahead.

It is politically axiomatic that no one tells a presidential candidate bad news. The captains and the lieutenants always are the bearers of good tidings—to the candidate.

Yet the reports that have been given Gov. Roosevelt thus far on this trip, and he has travelled through and spoken in half a dozen states since leaving Albany, have been so glowing that they transcend the usual type of political prognostication.

MOTHER KEEPS VIGIL

CARRIE NEWCOMER MRS. NEWCOMER

WOMAN ROBBED AND TORTURED IN MAINE

North Belgrade, Me., Sept. 16 (AP)—Tortured, robbed and the victim of an attempted criminal assault by two masked men who entered her home early today and drove her from bed at revolver point, Mrs. Anna N. Foster, 69, is in a serious condition suffering from bruises, shock and possible internal hemorrhages.

Mrs. Foster told police she was awakened shortly after 3 o'clock when one of the pair of marauders thrust a revolver against her side as she lay in bed.

Ordering her from bed, the men bound the aged woman hand and foot, carried her to a shed, and there demanded to know where she kept her money. They escaped with $38.

The pair burned the soles of her feet until they were blistered, in an attempt to make her admit having more money hidden about the house.

HOPE FADES FOR FLYING NURSE

Rome, Sept. 16 (INS)—Although hope for the transatlantic monoplane American Nurse and its three passengers was virtually dead, search for the craft was pressed by the Italian air ministry today.

Hope that the fliers, Dr. Leon M. Piscuili, Edna Newcomer and William Ulbrich, would be found had been virtually given up, however, and it was generally felt the plane had been lost at sea.

The last report that could possibly have involved the plane was one that said it had been seen circling Sardinia at 8 p. m. (Rome time) Wednesday.

JAILED BANDIT EXPECTS TO BE GREAT AUTHOR

New York, Sept. 16 (INS)—It was a happy smile that John Evans, 25, son of a California clergyman, today began the trip to Sing Sing where he will spend the next 10 years as a prisoner.

"The next 10 years of my life will be the best," he confidently asserted, for he sincerely believed he would emerge from jail a literary giant.

Evans, sentenced after pleading guilty to the attempted holdup of a drug store, admitted serving five years in San Quentin for a similar offense.

With the criticisms of such men as Henry Mencken, to help him, he spent his time writing.

It was the first time since he ran away from high school in Denver, Co., he said, he was able to concentrate on work and keep from falling into trouble.

"Look at John Bunyan and O. Henry," he said, "they probably never could have written the great stories they did if they had not had time to develop their talents in prison.

ALL 48 FOR GOV. ROOSEVELT---CURLEY

Los Angeles, Sept. 16 (INS)—"The people of 48 states want a change."

Arriving from San Francisco by airplane, Mayor James M. Curley of Boston declared that "Massachusetts will go for Franklin D. Roosevelt, and so will the other 47 states."

Mayor Curley said he had had to revise his forecast after the Democratic victory in Maine. Previously, he has said Roosevelt would carry 40 states.

"My confidence that Roosevelt will carry every state has been strengthened on my trip West," he said.

ON LEGION ACTION

Action of the American Legion in demanding repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and for immediate bonus payment "came as no surprise," Mayor Curley declared, adding:

"There is no doubt how the Legion feels about treatment by the administration of the Bonus Army in Washington. The men were there peacefully asking for relief, and the Army was called out to drive them from the capital. It was all right with the administration, however, for bankers, railroad presidents and heads of great corporations to be there lobbying for relief."

At the California State Democratic convention in Sacramento Mayor Curley said:

REFERENCE TO SMITH

"The Democratic party is fortunate, as is the nation, that it has Franklin D. Roosevelt for a candidate for President in this election.

"It has been asked, 'What will Al Smith do in this election?' which means so much to Americans.

"I say," thundered the Boston mayor, "that the result cannot be changed regardless of what any individual may do."

Speaking before the Democratic county central committee of San Francisco earlier in the week, Mayor Curley said:

Mayor Curley Guest at Hearst Ranch

Mayor Curley was a guest of William Randolph Hearst, publisher, today on the Hearst ranch in San Louis Obispo, Cal., according to word received by Cornelius A. Reardon at City Hall.

With the mayor is his son, Leo, who has accompanied him during his campaign tour of the West in the interest of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, candidate for the presidency.

According to Reardon, this is the first rest the mayor has taken in the last two weeks of strenuous campaigning. Wherever he has spoken, the mayor has received tremendous ovations from loyal supporters of Roosevelt.

Two years ago Mr. Hearst was guest of honor at the Tercentenary exercises in Boston. At the time, Mayor Curley referred to Hearst as "one of the most representative Americans."

PINCHOT DEFENDS B. E. F.

that Murphy interviewed and observed the veterans. He wrote:

"One could not fail to be impressed by the appearance of the campers. The children, on the whole, seemed very happy. An overwhelming number of the adults had a good presence. They showed a high degree of intelligence. Many of them, judging from their conversation and manner, came out of backgrounds of refinement.

"Every one of the approximately 75 men whom I questioned specifically as to their service records produced his service papers, showing honorable discharge from army or navy. I should say the age group ranged from 35 to 45. I saw no children beyond the age of 12 or 13 years.

POLICE NOT NEEDED

"With very few exceptions, the women appeared from all outward signs to be decent folk."

Murphy's report was one of several made by members of the state welfare department. Reports of others, including a woman, were similar to that of Murphy, who is a member of the board. His report continued:

"The B. E. F. provided its own discipline and self-control. The members were friendly to visitors. One was as safe in their camp as on the supervised streets of Johnstown. The state police were not in evidence, under a wise decision of Major Adams.

HEROES IN ARMY

"Some of the men who were married said they were definitely opposed to having their families with them either at Washington or in Johnstown. They felt they could be better taken care of if they had remained at home with relatives or friends. Others said their wives and children might just as well suffer or wander with them in a camp or on the road, for there wasn't anything back home or the place children months ago had been their home.

"I saw no women about whom

GOVERNOR PINCHOT

Pennsylvania Executive, Who Praises Conduct of Bonus Army, Evicted from Washington.

I would raise the slightest question as to their morality.

"One family consisted of mother, father, and three children; the parents were in a highly nervous state. The mother is the daughter of a professor in an Indiana college. This family had suffered privations and were not desirous of having their plight reported to their relatives. They had no particular destination. Mother and children were seemingly in very poor physical condition.

"I observed at least 15 men with Distinguished Service Crosses. One man at Johnstown said he had been a member of the Lafayette Escadrille. Another, Bernie Woods, acting commander in charge of the B. E. F. camp at Gettysburg, had also been a member of the Lafayette Escadrille.

EVICTION LIKE WAR

"From different people one got stories which indicted long unemployment, from one or two years; people who had had their homes, been independent at one time, and who had lost their savings. They gave evidence of having enjoyed and having treasured family life. There were graduate physicians, nurses, a graduate pharmacist, passenger conductors, locomotive firemen, artisans, one has structural iron workers, carpenters, white collar people, such as clerks, down to the casual and irregularly employed worker. They spoke with restraint; many certainly were folks who had read and liked books.

"The men in Camp McCloskey felt that they had been most unjustly and cruelly treated. One man after another said that that which happened at Washington was just like war.

"They referred over and over to the midnight 'attack' of the soldiers on camp marks when 10,000 men, women and children were driven out within a few hours. One could not tell whether the stories they told were based on facts or represented a misinterpretation of hysterical, overwrought people.

"It was a common remark, 'that night was dreadful. I never thought anything like this could happen in the United States, especially to men who had fought for the government.'"

Ape Gives Blood in Interest of Science

Chicago, Sept. 16 (U8)—"Bushman," a five-year-old gorilla at the Lincoln Park Zoo, gave some of his blood in the interests of science and was rewarded for his spartan fortitude with an extra bunch of bananas.

Bushman was selected as the subject of blood-tests because he is one of the healthiest specimens in the United States. The purpose was to determine, if possible, why it is that almost all captive great apes in this country die after they have been here a few years.

O'CONNELL ASKS CONFIDENCE IN BUSINESS

"Do you want the country to be out of the depression in 90 days?"

CO-OPERATION NECESSARY

The interest of the gathering was aroused as he offered the solution and several points of advice on buying and selling of merchandise.

"We ought to be intelligently optimistic and look forward to a good healthy increase in business and other lines of endeavor. We don't, however, expect to see immediately a 10 or 50 per cent increase, but at least an upward trend," he stated.

"It is not a one-man job.

"Everyone must co-operate.

"Every family must buy their normal wants. Doing this would immediately get the nation out of the doldrums and pull us out of the depression.

"Wages and employment will automatically increase with business."

BOSTON STORES AIDING

O'Connell stated that last week at its annual convention, the National Retail Dry Goods Association comprised of 3800 stores in the United States agreed to purchase $1,170,000,000 worth of manufactured goods in the next four months to stimulate the buying and selling power of the country.

He further pointed out that Boston stores alone were purchasing $60,000,000 worth of goods, which means, he said, an advance all along the line.

From his own experience and that of other large merchants in Boston, O'Connell said that business in the past 60 days is showing a decided improvement.

RICHEST BABY JOINS WETS

Newport, R. I., Sept. 16—For the first time in his career, John Nicholas Brown, who was one of the richest students at Harvard, will appear at a public meeting tonight—and he will speak against prohibition.

Brown is on the list as a speaker in the Rogers High School at a non-partisan meeting to advocate the abolition of prohibition, and a rumor was afloat today that the wealthy former "richest baby," who now is a settled married man, intends soon to launch himself on a political career.

Other speakers on tonight's program include Miss Edith M. K. Wetmore, national vice-president of the Women's Organization for Prohibition Reform; Col. Julian Codman of Boston and Mrs. William B. Bristow, Mrs. Charles H. Russell and Albert Lincoln Hoffman, all prominent in Newport society.

N.Y. Bankers to Lend Chicago $40,000,000

Chicago, Sept. 16 (INS)—New York bankers are ready to form a syndicate to advance the city of Chicago $27,500,000 for running expenses and $12,500,000 to permit refunding of bonds due January 1, it was learned today following the return of Mayor A. J. Cermak. The city will be able to pay back salaries to city employes and teachers.

Wife, Chased From Home, Wins Divorce

New Bedford, Sept. 16—Charges that Arthur M. Greenwood, New Bedford auto salesman, chased her from their home and threatened her life, won a divorce today for Mrs. Sarah R. Greenwood in probate court. The couple were married in January, 1925.

DuBOIS SUICIDE SPURS POLICE N HUNT FOR WIDOW

proof of murder without the body as a challenge.

The body search was widened in scope and made even more exhaustive.

The Boston Evening American learned the identity of a man and girl who were the last persons to be with Charles E. DuBois and his wife before Mrs. DuBois vanished on August 10, giving State detectives their most puzzling death case.

These witnesses, who the police believe may supply the information to clinch their story that DuBois was the slayer, are Lester Case and Miss "Lou" McCusker, both of Flushing, N. Y. Case is believed to be a jeweler.

They rode with Mr. and Mrs. DuBois from the DuBois camp at Great Herring Pond, Plymouth, on the afternoon of August 10 to Providence and saw the missing woman start back for Plymouth with her husband.

FORGERY SUSPECTED

Boy Scouts and citizen volunteers will be called upon to assist over the week-end—the biggest search ing party the state has ever organized.

Personally convinced of forgery in transfers made of Edith DuBois' property, Asst. Dist.-Atty. John V. Sullivan announced he was calling a handwriting expert.

Sullivan also asked New York authorities to prevent anybody from removing the property deeds now in the DuBois safe deposit box in Tuckahoe, N. Y.

The same official said that witnesses had been found who were told by DuBois as early as Aug. 2 and Aug. 4 that his wife had gone on an auto trip to Canada. DuBois claims she was killed in an accident and her body cremated.

DIVER MAY AID

Search for the missing body was also begun at Foxboro near the home of Mrs. John Butler, the woman DuBois said was killed with his wife in the auto crash.

Found at Lunenburg, N. S. very much alive, by the Boston Evening American, Mrs. Butler urged this search and the authorities immediately issued orders for it to begin.

Other developments today were:

1—Gen. Alfred F. Foote, head of the state police, and Capt. Thomas E. Bligh, head of the state detective force, join the state's leading homicide experts at Plymouth.

2—Supreme Court in New York asked to permit exhumation of torso found at Tuckahoe, N. Y., on ground that it might be the body of Edith DuBois.

3—Sub-cellar in DuBois' Tuckahoe, N. Y., home, used for storage of furniture, to be searched.

4—Announcement by officials that after Mr. and Mrs. DuBois left the Flushing couple at Providence, they were seen driving toward Plymouth in the dark. The next day acquaintances first heard story of Mrs. DuBois' accidental death.

A diver may be called upon to aid state police engaged in dragging Great Herring Pond at Plymouth for the body of Mrs. DuBois.

Rain was falling heavily when 16 members of Co. L of Plymouth responded to the call for assistance in the search for the missing contadellett at Great Herring Pond today.

DUBOIS MIXES DATES

The Boston Evening American learned that while being grilled by police, Charles DuBois said that Lester Case and "Lou" McCusker drove with him and his wife from Tuckahoe, N. Y., to Great Herring Pond on August 1.

DuBois then said he drove them to Providence, R. I., to take a train on Aug. 9, but later corrected this and made it August 7. Police believe it was Aug. 10. The date is of extreme importance and the questioning of the Flushing man and girl is anxiously awaited by the authorities.

SEARCH IN FOXBORO

A sink-hole and slough in the rear of the Foxboro home of Mrs. John Butler was the center of the search in that town, ordered by Asst. Dist. Atty. Sullivan and begun under direction of state detectives.

She told the Evening American that upon her return to Foxboro from a vaudeville tour shortly after the approximate time of Mrs. DuBois' disappearance, a youth in the neighborhood told her of seeing an automobile driven onto her property one night by a man who entered the woods near the sink hole.

A short time after her return, Mrs. Butler said she became aware of an obnoxious odor emanating from the vicinity of the slough, but as she was shortly leaving again on another stage tour she gave it no investigation and no further thought.

Police are reluctant to admit there is a possibility that Mrs. DuBois vanished of her own free will —that she may even have taken her own life because her husband's love for her had chilled and he had transferred his affections to Miss Grace Atwood, the blonde 24-year-old daughter of a wealthy Middleboro manufacturer, to whom he also transferred property in his wife's name.

That possibility is still present, however, although the investigators believe the missing woman would have come forward if she were still alive.

Asst. Dist.-Atty. Sullivan said he would engage a handwriting expert today to examine the purported signature of Edith DuBois on a transfer of Braintree property to "Grace DuBois"—who, the authorities say, is really Grace Atwood, wealthy Middleboro sweetheart of DuBois.

TO COMB WOODS

Regarding the search for the body, Sullivan said he was now especially interested, as far as Plymouth was concerned, in a search of other closed cottages, of abandoned wells and of the woodlands on the opposite side of the main highway from the DuBois camp.

Sullivan said:

"From the main highway, a small road leads off to the DuBois cottage. At a point exactly opposite the intersection is another road leading into the woodlands on the other side of the state highway. This second road is hardly noticeable.

"In my opinion, if Mrs. DuBois was murdered in that section, a person wishing to dispose of her body would be strongly inclined to travel by these roads, not wishing to remain on the state highway any longer than was absolutely necessary."

"I have learned that DuBois frequently took friends into the woodlands on the other side of the main highway to show them that section. On Sunday afternoons he liked to roam. He also used that other road in going to the beach.

"No mistakes are going to be made in this search. Every big of woodland, every possible hiding place will be searched.

"It is not the national guard cannot aid us in sufficient numbers, and will call for citizen volunteers to join the police in searching the woods. Also, I know we can get the Boy Scouts and will probably call upon them.

"We should have lots of help in this exhaustive search over the week-end. And no expense is going to be spared to solve this case. Every agency at my command will be thrown into this investigation."

TO SEARCH CELLAR

It was revealed that a letter found in the Tuckahoe, N. Y., home of DuBois, expressing condolence on the death of his wife, was postmarked in Fort Wayne, Ind., only one day after Mrs. DuBois vanished. The letter was addressed to "Uncle Charlie."

A second letter was from East Braintree and contained condolences from "John and I." The signature was withheld.

Authorities have learned that there is a sub-cellar in the Tuckahoe house, used ostensibly for storage of furniture, and search of this was ordered.

City Solicitor McAnarney of Quincy, DuBois' attorney, today replied to a statement of Asst. Attorney Sullivan that he had learned neither DuBois nor his lawyer was giving any help in the investigation, despite the fact that DuBois asserts his innocence.

McAnarney said:

"Well, that's good politics on Sullivan's part. Good strategy. But I am not going to turn myself into an investigation bureau for him. My first duty is to my client.

"Today is the first since this case was turned over to me that I have not been engaged in court and I am going to check up and verify certain information given to me.

"I will make no comment until I have completed that checkup."

McAnarney would not state what he was going to investigate and would not confirm a report that he would interview Charles DuBois' brother, Jules.

There is another possibility, admittedly vague, but nevertheless existent, which would cast DuBois not in the role of the wife-slayer police tried to make him out, but as a D'Artagnan of chivalry, prepared to undergo torture to shield his wife's reputation. It is a possibility based on his story to an officer of a bank in Tuckahoe, N. Y., that his wife eloped with another man.

Of one thing only were authorities this morning absolutely certain, they said. This was that Mrs. DuBois was not killed in any automobile accident with the DuBois's.

AUTO NOT MISSING

A report that the auto in which DuBois and his wife drove their guests to Providence was missing is not technically correct, the Evening American learned.

This car, state detectives were told by Larry Frazier, the DuBois chauffeur, was turned over to DuBois' attorney, McAnarney, shortly after the husband was released from the Plymouth police station Monday.

This was the same car, Frazier said, in which he drove Case and Miss Atwood to Tuckahoe, N. Y., and return shortly before the jewelier's arrest.

Frazier told police during questioning that he drove DuBois from the police station to McAnarney's office and that there his employer told him to take the car to a garage, remove the number plates and return with them to him.

Frazier said he refused to abide by the order and that the lawyer told him to leave the car behind the office building, which he did.

Asked about the deeding of Middle st. property in Braintree by DuBois to McAnarney, Sullivan said that he would have to investigate it thoroughly. He said that he understood the property was deeded from Edith M. L. DuBois to Grace DuBois, the latter a fictitious person believed to be Miss Atwood.

In a statement regarding this transfer, McAnarney said DuBois wanted him to collect the rents and send the money to his aged mother, whose whereabouts has been kept secret.

GERMANS SPURN PEACE PARLEY

Berlin, Sept. 16 (INS)—Convinced that the Geneva disarmament conference is doomed, the government today announced that construction of a third "pocket battleship" would be started October 1 at the Wilhelmshaven navy yard.

Building of the warship, similar in design to the powerful Ersatz Preussen which created such a stir in world admiralties, will require four years.

The initial appropriation was contained in the last budget of the Bruening ministry, but construction was delayed until the government had determined that the arms conference was unlikely to succeed.

French opposition to the German demand for arms equality which led the government to notify the powers that the Reich would no longer participate in the disarmament debates at Geneva inspired today's announcement.

3 HURT IN MINE PICKET ROUT

Braidwood, Ill., Sept. 16 (AP)—The invasion by union pickets of the northern Illinois mine fields in protest against the new $5-a-day basic scale, became a rout today after three miners had been wounded.

Chief Walter L. Moody of the state police confronted the encampment of striking pickets an announced what they were going home under escort.

In a few minutes the procession that had sought to stop digging in Braidwood, Coal City and Wilmington strip mines was homeward bound. There were 78 cars in the parade with police cars sprinkled through the line. None of the pickets was armed.

FINED $150 FOR WELFARE FRAUD

Michael Hannon, of West Fourth st., South Boston, pleaded guilty today to larceny from the city of Boston welfare board, and was fined $150 by Chief Justice Hall in Superior Court.

Hannon was charged with taking $120 from the board while having a bank account of $3500 and a partnership in a gas company.

He was sentenced to a year in the House of Correction in lower court, and after he appealed, full restitution was made to the welfare board, Judge Hall was told.

Textile Workers Re-elect McMahon

New York, Sept. 16 (AP)—Thomas F. McMahon of Providence, R. I., today was unanimously re-elected president of the United Textile Workers of America. He has held office since 1901.

Francis P. Gorman of Providence was re-elected first vice-president for his third term; William F. Kelly of Philadelphia was re-elected second vice-president for a second term, and James A. Starr of Paterson, N. J., was re-elected secretary-treasurer for a third term.

Million in Drug Supplies Stolen

New York, Sept. 16—William Finkelstein, executive director of the American Federation of Pharmacists, said that a million dollars worth of drug supplies were being stolen annually and sold through what he said were illegal shops and stores.

FORGED MONEY GANG HUNTED

Counterfeit $5 and $10 bills have been flooding cities and towns in the northern section of Greated Boston, it was revealed today when Secret Service Agent John J. McGrath was asigned to run down the passers.

Admission that McGrath was out in a hunt for the counterfeiters as well as the passers of the "queer" money was made by Chief Harry Barker of the Secret Service.

Chief Barker said the bills are "very good" insofar as their appearance goes, and he believes they are the work of old-timers in the counterfeit game, with youths employed to pass the bills in small stores and at filling stations.

Complaints regarding the counterfeits have come chiefly from store-keepers and filling station proprietors and the secret service agents believe they have good descriptions of at least two of the passers.

These two have been riding in an automobile and buying only small quantities of gasoline at each station. With each purchase one of the bad bills has been presented and good money received in change.

Police of Everett, Malden, Chelsea and Revere are co-operating with the federal men in the hunt for the source of the counterfeits.

Arizona Governor Defeated

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 16—Trailing by more than 5000 votes in his race for renomination, George W. P. Hunt, seven times Democratic Governor of Arizona, conceded victory today to Dr. B. B. Moeur.

An Open Letter to Mr. Arthur Brisbane

Dear Mr. Brisbane:

For years you have preached the doctrine that costs of distribution should be lowered. We, at Sears, are in hearty agreement with that doctrine, and since Sears does business with a large part of America, we thought that you would like to know how we lower the costs of distribution.

We begin by buying from the best manufacturers in America.

We lay down extensive and rigid specifications governing the manufacture of the merchandise.

We aid the maker with information gathered by our engineers and designers. We assist him to buy raw material, and place at his disposal our facilities for buying in tremendous quantities. We frequently give him work to do in the off season. And when the goods are ready and have passed rigid laboratory tests — we pay him cash.

Thus we are assured at the outset of sound merchandise — of customer satisfaction — and the lowest possible cost.

We ship the goods at low rates by carload, trainload and boatload to ten great warehouses centrally located for economical distribution. The goods move to Sears' stores located for the most part outside high rent districts. These stores are efficient organizations to serve the community — not monuments to serve our vanity. They are equipped simply to display merchandise plainly, and are manned by men and women humanly eager for the success of the business because they share in its profits. We leave the frills out in order to leave the values in.

We place the emphasis on the contents rather than on the package.

We are constantly at war with waste in order to keep costs down and demand up. We are always seeking ways to manufacture—for instance, a stove, and deliver it to the housewife, so that she gets more stove for less money. And when we succeed in keeping the costs down, what happens? The housewife buys the stove, more steel and iron are consumed, more workers employed, more money circulated, and everybody benefits, including the housewife, whose burden of housekeeping has in some degree been decreased.

More than forty years ago Sears began to wrestle with this problem. We haven't completely licked it, but we are always at it. You recall that Thomas Jefferson held that government to be ideal which brings the greatest good to the greatest number. We, at Sears, feel that the business of the future may well serve a social, in addition to a private purpose.

That it may do this by skilfully effecting the widest possible distribution of goods to the greatest number of people, thereby assuring prosperity to everybody on the land and in the cities, and enabling every person to share in a higher degree the fruits of farm and factory. Lasting prosperity will come only when the prodigal potentialities of America have been bent to the uses of every man, woman and child in the country, and of all the ills that affect prosperity one of the gravest is wasteful distribution.

At Sears, successive generations of capable men have given their time and strength—from office boy to president—to solving this problem. That we have succeeded in some degree is borne out by the fact that in seven years we have been able to build and operate successfully nearly four hundred retail stores selling a half million dollars at retail every working day to customers who know that at Sears their money buys more merchandise and fewer frills.

We think, Mr. Brisbane, that you perform a valuable service to the country at large when you call its attention to the vital necessity of lowering costs of distribution.

And because your influence is nation-wide and our business is country-wide, we are happy that your views and our views on this problem are in harmony.

And we pledge you that in the future, as in the past, everybody at Sears will devote his intelligent efforts to satisfying the largest number of needs of the largest number of people at the lowest possible cost.

Sincerely,

R. E. Wood

President, Sears Roebuck and Company.

Officers rushed to the lodging house on Hancock st. and combed it for a note. For a confession.

And a box of bullets.

DuBois shot himself through the head in the bathroom on the second floor of the big wooden house at 11:10 a. m.

Nobody heard the shot, but George Griffin, the owner, heard something fail. He tried the door. It was locked.

Griffin called the police. Patrolmen Walter McKenna and Daniel Ford rushed over in the police car.

One officer pushed the key out of the bathroom door and the other sought and found a key which would fit the lock.

USED ASSUMED NAME IN HIS SECLUSION

When the door was opened, they saw a big man slumped in the corner. It was a gruesome sight. DuBois was almost sitting up.

The trained eyes of the policeman saw a hole through the temple. The bullet had passed out the top of the head, which was covered with blood.

The bullet, having done its deadly work, was on the floor a short distance from the dying man. The gun was at his side.

"That's Ralph Anderson!" cried Griffin. "He's been living here three days."

This had been DuBois' place of seclusion while in half a dozen places police sought the body of his missing wife. This had been the hideaway of the jeweler from prying eyes, following his arrest, his grilling and his release.

The policemen called for the ambulance from the Hancock st. house, and in it arrived Patrolman James MacKay, who found out who the dying man had been.

GIRL'S PHOTO RIPS HIS MASK OF SECRECY AWAY

MacKay helped carry the limp body to the ambulance on a stretcher. The start for the hospital was made. Then MacKay searched the man's pockets.

Out came the photograph of Grace Atwood. Her loving note to DuBois, found in DuBois' summer camp at Plymouth, had brought her into the investigation and she had admitted intending to marry him.

Out came, also, a personal card of DuBois.

TORSO TO BE EXHUMED IN BELIEF IT IS WIFE

MacKay knew he was dealing with the most important thing the Massachusetts authorities have had on their hands in many months. He quizzed DuBois. He held the picture to his eyes. He persisted. But no answers came.

Search for the body of Edith DuBois became even more frantic when to Plymouth, to Braintree, to Foxboro, to Middleboro, to New York—to every scene of activity in this amazing mystery—news of DuBois' suicide was flashed.

By police radio, Gen. Alfred F. Foote, head of the State police, heard the suicide news in a driving rain at Great Herring Pond, Plymouth, where National Guardsmen were searching.

The Boston Evening American conveyed the news first to numerous other leaders of the investigation.

At the very time that DuBois' life was ebbing swiftly away behind that locked door into Hancock st. lodging house, the Supreme Court in New York was authorizing exhumation of a torso found at Tuckahoe, N. Y., to ascertain if it was that of Edith DuBois.

With discovery that the man who shot himself was not Anderson but DuBois, officials rushed to the house, which was kept under police guard.

Mrs. Eva Griffin told them of DuBois' shaving off his mustache last night. Others in the house, both supplying bits of information, were Moses B. ogg and Lester Leavitt.

SUICIDE SPURS HUNT FOR CONFESSION OF MURDER

Search for a confession was ordered to take place in DuBois' houses in Braintree and Tuckahoe, N. Y., as well as in the Quincy lodging house and other places where DuBois may have been during the last few days.

This was only a few hours after his release at Plymouth, after the district court judge had refused to issue a murder warrant, there being no corpus delicti, police being unable to prove Edith DuBois was murdered.

DuBois had claimed his wife was killed in an auto crash and her body cremated.

At Quincy Hospital, Dr. James Cook, who knew DuBois, confirmed Patrolman MacKay's identification.

Hearing the news by radio, Commissioner of Public Safety Foote and Capt. Thomas E. Bligh, chief of state detectives, near Plymouth in their car, immediately turned around and headed for Quincy Hospital.

HIS BELONGINGS SEEM TO MOCK POLICE, TOO

They arrived before DuBois died. But they could not unveil those silent, unmoving lips. Though they stayed there until death arrived.

When his heart stopped its failing beat, the officers left the hospital and went to the lodging house at 1079 Hancock st., for the inspection of DuBois' effects.

There again they were balked. The meagreness of DuBois' belongings were a sad joke on the police. From first to last the man had mocked them.

EX-POLICEMAN SEIZED IN PLOT

Orrin F. Gleason, 38, of Graves pl., Lynn, former Lynn policeman, has been indicted by the Essex County grand jury for the alleged film-flamming of a Haverhill doctor's girl secretary, it was learned today when Gleason was arrested.

The former policeman, who was dropped from the department six years ago after a series of thefts on his beat, is charged with larceny and conspiracy to commit larceny.

Miss Florence Daige, New st., Haverhill, secretary to Dr. William H. Briggs of Haverhill, who is serving a year's sentence at Middleton State Farm for illegal surgery, is the girl fleeced.

She told police and Dist. Atty. Cregg that a man who declared he could obtain a parole for the physician visited her and she paid him a total of $310 for "expenses."

When he returned and declared he would need $250 more because some one who had to be "taken care of" demanded the money, the secretary arranged a signal with the doctor's wife and daughter, who followed the man's car.

The registration number was found to be one assigned to "Minerva Gleason, Forest st., Middleton." This address was false, but the car was traced to Gleason.

NAME OF FR. COX NOT ON BALLOT

Hundreds of Boston voters who signed the nomination papers for the Rev. James R. Cox, Jobless Party's presidential candidate, will have to write in his name on the ballot as the papers were filed too late for the Pittsburgh priest's name to be included.

Dr. Earl Cox, Pittsburgh dentist, and brother of the candidate, and George W. Bridgeman, who represented Fr. Cox here, plan to return before election day to campaign.

Fr. Cox is now on a tour of the west.

Man Still Held in Grape Sale Probe

Andrew Pollara, 42, of Ferry st., Malden, taken into custody Wednesday during police investigation of an alleged grape racket, in which purchasers of grapes were forced by threats to buy from a certain merchant, was still held by police last night.

Officials at police headquarters were awaiting a reply from Chief of Police Martin H. Chadin of Syracuse, N. Y., to whom they had rushed Pollara's fingerprints.

Friend Bares DuBois' Fear Wife Was Drug Addict

By BERT FORD

Middleboro, Sept. 16—Shortly before her disappearance Mrs. Edith DuBois was accused by her husband, Charles DuBois, of secretly taking morphine. The fact that DuBois suspected his wife of having contracted the drug habit was enlarged on today during the investigation of the Great Herring pond mystery.

There was a stormy scene at their Plymouth cottage when DuBois discovered a box of tiny pellets in a medicine chest.

"Where did you get these things?" inquired DuBois angrily. "Some more drug I suppose."

FRIEND TELLS OF INCIDENT

But the explanation didn't satisfy DuBois, according to a statement made today by Charles G. Swenning, who visited the couple weekly at their cottage and lived with them for months in New York.

"I was at their cottage when Charlie found the box of pills," said Swenning today. "He was quite angry for a time, but the incident was soon forgotten. I think Charlie was wrong in his suspicion. Mrs. DuBois suffered from acute abdominal pains at times and undoubtedly took some sort of medicine to allay the pain, but I doubt if she ever used opiates of any sort.

"She mentioned at the time that the pellets mentioned by her husband merely eased her nerves and produced sleep. When I called on Charlie in Braintree after published announcement that his wife was killed in an automobile accident in Canada, I found him removing certain effects from the suite which they occupied in their apartment house.

AIDED ILL VET

"He opened the medicine cabinet and, pointing to boxes and bottles, said, 'Look at those. See what Edith took.'

"I got the impression that he suspected his wife may have started taking a drug because of contact with a disabled World War veteran whose family occupied one of their apartments.

"I went to Braintree that day to offer my condolences to DuBois. A friend had mailed from Wollaston a clipping from a Quincy newspaper stating that Mrs. DuBois and two companions had been killed and their bodies cremated. I told Charlie I was terribly sorry. He replied, 'Yes, it's bad news. But nothing can be done about it.'

"Naturally I was shocked to learn of Mrs. DuBois' tragic death, and surprised to think that she hadn't mentioned anything to me about her plan to go on a motor trip to Canada when I visited their Plymouth cottage a day or two before she disappeared."

Gambling Losses Abroad Not Taxable

Washington, Sept. 16—Gambling losses incurred by citizens of the United States in legalized foreign gambling casinos are allowable deductions from gross incomes if there is satisfactory evidence the transaction producing the losses were entered into for profit.

This was ruled by C. M. Charest, general counsel of the internal revenue bureau.

HOME LIFE OF MRS. DuBOIS IS REVEALED

The first intimate view of the home life of Charles and Edith DuBois was given the Boston Evening American today by Frank M. Sullivan, 23, of 606 Main st., South Weymouth.

It was Sullivan who, as a boy, was the cause of a rift between DuBois and his now missing wife. He was hailed into court as a stubborn child, at the age of 20, and Mrs. DuBois faced court on a charge of harboring a delinquent child, because of their association. Both charges were dismissed but DuBois and Sullivan, once close friends, never again were friendly.

LIVED IN WEYMOUTH

Sullivan now makes his home with Louis A. Cook, Jr., attorney and former clerk of Dedham court. His mother also lives in South Weymouth, at 1099 Main st.

This is his story:

"I know both Mr. and Mrs. DuBois probably as well as any person in Massachusetts. She ran a cabaret in New York city, where DuBois met her. They were married in New York and he got a job in Boston as a jewelry designer and they came to South Weymouth to live with Henry Herman, who was chef in the old Dryfus cafe in Boston.

"The Hermans lived on Forest st. After a while Mr. and Mrs. DuBois rented a house in White Park, then known as Roosevelt ave. That's how I happened to meet them, as my father, Timothy Sullivan, now dead, owned the house next the one they rented.

BECAME FRIENDLY

"I was 14 or 15 at the time and was going to grammar school. The street was in a bad way and the DuBoises wanted to know of me if I knew anyone who could put some gravel on it.

"I got a fellow named Leary and we hauled some gravel and fixed the road. The DuBois garage needed a cement floor and they asked me if I could fix that. So I hired a horse from a man named Marsh who ran a livery stable and got a tip cart and hauled gravel for a couple of days filling in the garage floor and grading the land. The landlord of their house, a Mr. Decker, paid me for that work.

"DuBois had me take care of the heater and ashes at that time. We became very friendly.

TELLS OF RIDES TOGETHER

We went on many rides together and my mother and sister also went along and we frequently went fishing for smelt off Gow Point in Hingham.

"One night in his house about two years before they moved to Braintree, DuBois came home and supper wasn't ready. His brother, Jules, was there at the time. Mrs. DuBois had been out and when DuBois asked her why supper wasn't ready, Jules said, 'Because she's been out riding all afternoon with a couple of men.'

"Mrs. DuBois turned to Jules and said, 'You mind your own business.' Then, turning to her husband, she asked him to put his brother out of the house. I was frying steak at the time. Instead of putting his brother out, Charlie went to his defense and turned on his wife.

"Shortly after they moved to Middle st., Braintree, she met me one day and said, 'Charlie saw you the other night going up the railroad track.'

"I had been there that day and many times previous. I hung all the pictures on the walls and laid the carpet in the house for her. The reason I did this was because I liked her very much.

"She never paid me for doing anything of that sort. On the day I speak of she said Charlie asked her if I had been there and 'I said no, but he called me a liar, and said he had seen you walking up the tracks.' There was a path through a field back of the house leading to the tracks.

TELLS OF THREATS

"She then told me her husband had bought a revolver and had it in his dresser.

"She said he threatened to get me if I went to the house again.

"Just before they moved to Braintree he had accused me of stealing a quart of liquor. I did not steal it. From then on we were not friendly at all—Charlie and I.

"When DuBois was friendly with me he frequently asked me to go out with Mrs. DuBois when he would remain in the city. He was always glad to have me take his wife driving or to the seashore and he permitted me to use his automobile for that purpose. 'Give her a good time,' he used to say.

"About that court case, here is the way that happened. It was in January, 1915. My mother objected to my going over to the DuBois house so much and she got my father excited and he went down to see Attorney Cook, who wouldn't do anything about it, but sent my father to Tom Nash, who is now register of probate at Dedham.

"J. J. McAnarney represented Mrs. DuBois. Nash secured a summons for Mrs. DuBois for harboring a delinquent child and I was brought into court on a charge of being stubborn. I was then only a few months from my 21st birthday. Both cases were dismissed by Judge Avery but he said to me, 'Don't go over to the DuBois house so often.'

"I worked on the New Haven railroad as a brakeman in 1918 when DuBois lived in Weymouth. I frequently saw him with a girl on the train. I also saw him with this same girl in the South Station while they waited for the train together. The girl always got off at Wollaston and rode with him every night from the South Station on a train that left some time between 8 and 7 p. m.

"The last time I saw Mrs. DuBois was about a year ago when she came to me from an auto in Braintree. Last previous to that was in 1926 in the early spring when I met her and she told me her husband had just opened a business of his own in Boston."

NEGRO LYNCHED IN $10 THEFT

Crossett, Ark., Sept. 16 (AP)—A Negro, accused of stealing a $10 bill, was taken from jail, lynched and his body left dangling from a pole in the business section a few minutes after he slashed the throat of a guard in an attempt to escape.

The Negro, Frank Tucker, 24, arrested on a charge of trying to steal from a bank teller's window, was under guard by Deputy Sheriff Henry Reed in City Hall awaiting hearing when he produced a razor and demanded the guard's gun.

Reed tried to draw his weapon, but the Negro slashed at his throat, inflicting a cut, and ran. He was captured by bystanders after a short chase and turned over to Night Marshal H. Johnson, who placed him in jail.

ACCUSED BLAZE SETTER DIES

Worcester, Sept. 16—Joseph Abate, 30, of Cumberland st., sought since Monday on a charge of arson, died today in a New London, Ct., hospital of burns, according to word received by police here.

Monday night a man believed to have been Abate was seen fleeing from a Cumberland st. bungalow owned by Dominic Scrippio, after a terrific explosion, followed by fire.

Police charge Abate had set the fire and that the explosion was caused by gasoline. Their suspicions were strengthened when Abate fled another Cumberland st. house on their arrival, leaving a loaded revolver.

Police are continuing their investigation to learn if Scrippio, who had ordered the tenants out a few hours before the fire is implicated.

Charge It' Say Fair Drivers Now for Traffic Sins

Evanston Ill. Sept. 16 (AP)—Evanston won on, arrested for traffic violations, may simply say to the arresting officer

"Please charge it"

The new system of "charge accounts" was adopted yesterday as a result of protests of many women who said they were being inconvenienced by being arrested while on the way home from shopping or as when they had no money left to pay fines or for bonds.

When they appear later in court, however, the transactions will be strictly cash.

BRITISH EXPECT MORATORIUM

London, Sept. 16 (INS)—Although Great Britain today had allowed the date in which she might ask partial postponement of debt payments due the United States Dec. 15 to slip by, it was believed the government hopes a general war debts moratorium will come sooner or later from Washington.

The government here is suspending the outcome of the American presidential elections but officials expect the world economic condition to bring suggestions for the new moratorium.

It was evident that should the United States demand payment Dec. 15 the demand would be regarded by British officialdom as an accident.

It was said however the government would be prepared to meet the payment if necessary by borrowing.

NEW DEAL FOR WORKERS ASKED

Washington, Sept. 16 A warning that the capitalistic system must be adjusted to protect workers was given by Louis F. Budenz, secretary dept. of William Filene's Sons Company, and president of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies of Boston before the national relief and welfare methods conference here.

"Heaven only knows how many millions of self-respecting citizens will be dependent upon our social agencies during the coming winter," Budenz said.

"Relief funds contain our guarantee against the basic miseries that breed hunger and disease. We must make our contributors realize that it is not only the actual poverty consequent upon unemployment but also its discouragement and its sense of not being needed that destroys people.

"Unless we find ways of ultimately eliminating unemployment and periodic collapse, our right to continue leadership will be questioned, and rightly so."

Malden Checks Use of Welfare Funds

Checks issued by the Malden welfare department are being traced by investigators of Mayor William A. Hastings. A number of the checks were cashed in a city of Malden with a majority in Cambridge banks.

In many instances it has been impossible to learn the names of persons with the checks through endorsements. The investigators declare some startling discoveries will be made as to the actual use of these checks supposed to be for food and absolute necessities.

France Honors McKeon, One of Walker's Defenders

New York, Sept. 16—The republic of France has honored John J. McKeon, who was James J. Walker's close friend when Walker was mayor and received dramatic acclaim in the Seabury investigation.

France has decorated McKeon with one of the nation's most coveted honors the Legion of Honor, Chevalier.

Samuel Seabury, who like McKeon and Walker is now abroad, said four men he is known as supporting on the one member of the 12 on the Legion of Honor before he could locate him. McKeon's bank accounts aroused Seabury's initial interest.

McKeon first testified he had handed Walker $8,400 in stock of Equitable Coach corporation in a brown envelope in a restaurant. The stock became from Walker's personal account in the Chase National bank, between Golden pool, in which Walker and others participated.

AROUND THE THEATERS With Nicholas Young

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

Perhaps with more than any other branch of the allied arts the theaters have been sweeping around for signs of prosperity. It is now generally conceded in the magic wand game tufted chairs in New York, the Boston is the nation's fairest spot. To be sure, only two shows have been sent to these eastern shores to break a drought that extent from Chicago to New England from the drama's summer of hopes. But there is compensating consolation. Neither Chicago nor Philadelphia, of our key cities, nor even hard and fast Manhattan, have exhibited more deliberate signs of better times. Boston, we are informed on creditable authority, seems to be pointing the way to happier days in the playhouses.

Whenever "The Green Pastures moves out of the Colonial, and the date of exodus is still in the air, a willing tenant is already prepared to take over that playhouse for a season of light opera. Mr. Milton Aborn, who dabbles in such things, has already come to terms with the United Booking office, and through Augustus Pitou, who supervises such matters for the Erlanger estate, the Colonial has been made available. Mr. Aborn, abetted by Howard Marsh, rollicking and romantic tenor, shuffles the cards for the National Civic Light Opera Company. The same organization treated the old town to some rather fetching Gilbert and Sullivan productions a year ago. There are prospects of much more of the same thing before the autumn gives way to winter's icy blasts.

THE VOICE OF Broadway

By Louis Sobol

Broadway Merry-Go-Round!

Step lively, folks, and let's get underway. Don't let anything annoy you today for it's a short ride and a merry one. Just keep your ears open and use your eyes and you'll see and hear things. Now, that dignified looking structure over there on 52nd st. is a speakeasy, folks, and you don't have to whisper because it's no secret. Just watch the people coming in and out and if you peek inside with me you'll see the bar crowded. That's something to write home about because up until a few weeks ago this speak and most of the others were beginning to wonder how they'd pay off the landlord, but all of a sudden, it seems, things have taken a turn for the better. Upon my word they have, if speaks are a barometer, for most of these places are beginning to crowd up again and I rather like that, personally, for when people begin to congregate things happen and when things happen, it's news and news is my commodity. I'm beginning to believe that it will be a good year for the lads who operate these hushed rendezvous and the night clubs.

I call your attention, ladies and gentlemen, to that lad with the pleasant features. A comedian of some reputation, he is, Jack Benny, by name—he belongs to what we call the droll school and much of his success is due, I imagine, to his apparent utter lack of confidence in his ability to tell a story that may amuse you. He almost apologizes, for instance, in relating one that tossed a flock of us into stitches the other night and if it doesn't sound funny in print, it's because it's so difficult to convey Benny's gestures and grimaces as he relates the yarn. An aerial acrobat comes out on the stage, holds up one finger to indicate he's going to make one turn in the air. He does. Not a single hand is moved in applause. Undiscouraged, he holds up two fingers, makes two complete turns. No applause. He holds up three fingers. He makes three turns in mid-air. The audience yawns. Four fingers. Four turns. No applause. Finally, with a grand dramatic gesture he holds up five fingers, hops bravely on to the trapeze and makes five sensational turns in the air, landing on his head at the end. He rises, bows triumphantly—but not a single clap of the hand or even a feeble cheer rewards him. So placing his hands under his chin, he dances out like a ballet girl for an exit. The house manager greets him. "You were terrific," he chirps. "That last stunt—five complete somersaults in mid-air was sensational. Why did you have to spoil it by exiting like a nance with your hands under your chin?" The acrobat grinned weakly. "I broke my neck on the last one." Positively the silliest story you ever heard but Benny panicked them over at the Nut Club Monday night with that story—which gives you an idea what a great comedian he must be.

He's not riding around with us, these days—Jimmy Walker, mean, the gayest mayor Manhattan's ever known. Out on the [illegible] sea is the lad who suddenly tossed up his job and those of [illegible] Broadway [illegible] him, for he's a good fellow, regardless of [illegible] never thought of him as directing head of [illegible] town. But the reason I'm bringing Jimmy to [illegible] this time is that yesterday, one of his closest [illegible] to me, that just before he sailed Jimmy ad[illegible] care if he never saw the inside of a city office again—in other words, that despite all the talk and his own statement at the time of his resignation, he will never run for political office again—not even if it means vindication.

That's one of the prettiest girls I know. I was the first to bring some recognition to her when she was singing Russian songs and playing a guitar in a little rendezvous on 44th St. and since then she's been featured in several night clubs and only the other day landed a picture contract. I'm not mentioning her name because what I'm going to tell you might hurt her sensitive nature, but it seems she's fallen madly in love with a nice young chap and they're going to get married as soon as they can afford it. The irony is this—among other things you've seen her pictures in the rotogravure pages attired in a fetching bridal costume—a costume she wishes she could buy and use—and the point is, that the boy's father is one of the leading bridal gown designers—in fact, designed the very one in which she was pictured last Sunday. Now over there is a pretty girl and you mustn't hold it against her, if I tell you, she's a press agent. She was the late Harry Reichenbach's chief assistant and I imagine she could tell tales out of school that Reichenbach purposely omitted from his posthumous autobiography. She once told me that David Belasco showed her a scar on his hand which he said was the result of smashing a mirror with his fist when he finally broke with Mrs. Leslie Carter after managing her for 16 years, and how the son of the famous Caruso, trying to sing "Pagliacci" in small time vaudeville in Newark engaged her services to promote him as the famous papa's successor in opera. Another press agent I call to your attention is John Peter Toohey of the Sam Harris forces who seems content and yet here is a chap who promised to be one of the country's leading short story writers—I don't know of any series I enjoyed more than his famous yarns years ago in the Satty Evenon Post. And still another gentleman of the mimeograph is Russell "Buck" Crouse, once a favorite columnist with a high brow following and author of non-fiction books that are truly distinctive—even to the illustrations.

Well, Fannie Brice is back with us—comical gal—and shrewd. I hear she's worth a million dollars, made it all herself—and now she's on her way to a second million which makes her eligible for one of those success magazine stories and I'm just wondering what Horatio Alger, Jr., could have done with the Brice gal as his heroine in one of his from "Rags to Riches" pot boilers.

RICHARD CROMWELL TO STAR IN "BROKEN BLOSSOMS" FILM

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Sept. 16—Is there any adult film fan who doesn't remember David Wark Griffith's hauntingly beautiful "Broken Blossoms"? The direction of Griffith, then at his peak, and the poignant portrayals of Richard Barthelmess and Lillian Gish gave most of us an unforgetable adventure in movie-going.

Harriet Parsons

Now it is almost a certainty that Radio, who own the Thomas Burke story, will remake it with young Richard Cromwell as the gentle Chinese lad. Radio has an arrangement with Columbia, to whom Dick is under contract, whereby they can borrow him for two or three pictures a year. And if Columbia is willing, "Broken Blossoms" will be one of the three.

If anyone can follow in the Barthelmess footsteps—and I think the Chinese boy of "Broken Blossoms" stands as his greatest characterization—it is his namesake, the appealing Dick. He proved it by his film debut in "Tol'able David," also a remake of a great Barthelmess silent. How about Joan Peers or Anita Louise for the Gish role? Both have youth, fragile wistfulness, talent.

Old Favorites

"The Adventuress," an original story by Scenarist Alice D. G. Miller, has been purchased by Warners as a vehicle for William Powell and Kay Francis. It's the story of a young woman married to an old man (not Powell, you may be sure). This will make the third Powell-Francis co-starring film for Warners, and prior to that they were teamed at Paramount. Powell has "Lawyer Man," with Joan Blondell, to make before "The Adventuress." Incidentally, Max Trell, who authored "Lawyer Man" and "Out on Parole," an original prison yarn for Universal, writes a daily children's feature for King Features Syndicate. Seems like a long cry from kids to crime.

Trouble Brewing

Unless my grapevine channel is turning sour, there's a situation shrieking over at Radio which has to do with Actress Ann Harding. Although she shortly became [illegible] rich role in "Animal Kingdom," Director Charles Morgan's fine novel, "The Fountain," has been announced as a future vehicle for her. I shouldn't be surprised to see Ann and Radio come to an amicable parting of the ways one of these not-so-distant days. Her contract has almost two years to run, but I believe Radio would be willing to talk release terms. Hollywood has brought Ann more than her share of tragedy. Her marriage shattered and her film career, in spite of its auspicious beginning, slowing up perceptibly, I have a hunch she would just as soon get away from heartbreak town for good. Too bad. A fine actress. A fine person. What's wrong?

Ann Harding

Seen and Heard

Radio holding up production on "Animal Kingdom" till Myrna Loy finishes "Mask of Fu Manchu," at M-G-M. She'll play the calculating, selfish wife opposite Leslie Howard. Radio wanted Karen Morley for the role, but illness prevented the deal. Howard has been at M-G-M, too, completing "Smilin' Thru." Mrs. Chester Morris came through an appendicitis operation Tuesday splendidly. The Bob Montgomerys, great pals of the Morrises, spent the whole day at the hospital. Ken (Old Salt) MacKenna, having had his fill of whaling, has signed to do William Cotton's play, "The Bride the Sun Shines On." For local stage producers Belasco and Curran. Opens in San Francisco, Oct. 9.

Around the Lots

Charles (American Colony) Brackett, whose sophisticated novel about Americans on the Riviera was quite a shocker, hops to write Connie Bennett's next for Radio. He'll adapt an original yarn by Adela Rogers Hyland. Incidentally, I hear most of "Rockabye," the recently previewed Bennett flicker, will have to be remade. Too many audience snickers in the wrong places.

Shanghai, Sept. 16 (INS).—The sharpest note dispatched by one "friendly" nation to another in the history of modern diplomacy has been forwarded to Tokio by the government at Nanking, it was disclosed today.

China accuses Japan "of relentlessly pursuing a policy of violence, murder and conquest in Manchuria unparalleled in the history of modern states."

The text of the Nanking note, dispatched yesterday after Japan had signed a treaty with the new Manchukuan State of Manchukuo and had formally recognized the new regime in of such nature that face-to representatives here believe it might possibly end to an open break between the two countries.

The note reviews the recent history of Manchuria and charges Japan contemptuously ignored the agreements of the United States, Great Britain and other friendly powers, the League of Nations and world opinion by recognizing a puppet state born of its own military action.

This action, the note continues, is a direct challenge to the League.

Today, in the seat exile ceremony of the Dissolved Abe, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment.

Helen Johns, of Burget ave., Medford, member of the winning Olympic 400-meter swimming team, gazes sadly at the empty box that once held her medal. She missed the trophy on arrival from California. Last night at a banquet tendered her by the Women's Swimming Association of Brookline, she told of her loss and said the A. A. A. U. had joined the hunt for her award. (Staff photo.)

Buck Passing in the Army

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The next time Secretary Hurley feels a speech coming on, we advise him to take a sneeze powder.

Seems strange that he doesn't know what happened right under his duly appointed nose. But he swears he didn't call out the soldiers on his honor as a gentleman and an officer by an act of Congress.

General Glassford denies doing it. The White House refused to accept the nomination. It must have been the cook's day off.

There's only one safe way to visit Washington these days. Paint yourself up like an easter egg and roll on the White House lawn.

THREE ADVANCE TO PRIESTHOOD

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 16.—In St. Joseph's Cathedral where he himself was consecrated bishop of Manchester a few weeks ago, Bishop John B. Peterson formerly of Somerville, Mass., took the second step today in the ordination of three priests.

Yesterday at a ceremony in St. Joseph's, Desmond O'Connor of Gorveton, Louis J. Demers of Claremont and Armand Dube of Franklin were made sub-deacons and today they were made deacons and received the title of reverend.

Tomorrow the three will become full-fledged priests and will celebrate their first masses.

CITES SAVINGS IN P. O. COSTS

Springfield, Sept. 16 (AP).—John W. Philp, fourth assistant postmaster general, told the National Association of Postmasters in convention here today that material reductions in the cost of post office operations have been accomplished in the last two years.

"The whole price structure has declined," Philp said, "and it was obviously our duty to readjust our expenses in accordance with the new conditions."

He said $681,000 was saved out of the 1931 appropriation for salaries, $745,000 out of 1932 funds and predicted a $650,000 saving in 1933 for an aggregate reduction in the three fiscal years of 42,026,000.

M'KNIGHT WARNED IN CLASH WITH BUSHNELL

THIS IS LIFE

WHAT IRKED GOODWIN IS PROBABLY THE G. O. P FEMININE STYLE

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS

I BELIEVE IT was a Scot who was seen at a dancing party leaning against a door-jamb and glowering glumly at the proceedings. When asked what was the matter, he replied dourly: "Them women spoil the ball!"

R. E. ROGERS

Apparently Frank A. Goodwin felt much the same way the other day at the Salem meeting of the Essex County Women's Republican Club. It was one of these gala political occasions which Essex County, I am convinced, does just a little better than any other. Mrs. Dolly Gann, markedly silent about Maine, was there—'n' everythin'.

Mrs. Gann spoke in extenso but the mere men were timed by the chairwoman and when the allotted number of minutes had ticked off they had a large brass dinner bell rung at them. It happened even to Mr. Goodwin, who thereupon left the platform, his face red, muttering:

"Highbrow women are ruining the Republican party."

Women Know Their Parliamentary Stuff

Some one ought to answer Mr. Goodwin, even in the words of Shakespeare:

"But Goodwin says the gals are highbrow
And Goodwin is an honorable man . . .
If this be true, it is a grievous fault
And grievously will Dolly answer for it . . ."

But I gather that he was not referring to Mrs. Gann alone. He was referring to the general situation which results from the energy and practical ability of a determined minority of women.

Two years ago a minority of Republican women of Massachusetts blackjacked Mr. Allen and Mr. Butler into standing by prohibition and so contributed largely to their defeat. It is impossible to say how decisive has been the invasion by women into the national question on the wet side, but it has been very important. Once the women of wealth, social position and education got thoroughly tired of having the prohibitionists claim them as their own, once the various women's organizations against prohibition were started, there was a noticeable acceleration in the movement.

I can see why Mr. Goodwin got sore. In the first place he has been long accustomed to the loose, lax, go-as-you-please way in which men handle meetings and organization. Men have an infinite sense of leisure. Women have not. Men have been trained in a very casual school. Women have been trained in the rigid, exact, merciless school of women's club procedure, where a slip of the gavel may well mean social death. If you want to see parliamentary law in its finest flower, go to a large women's club at the annual meeting when there is a really robust lady parliamentarian in the chair. She will make the late Thomas Brackett Reed look like the head of a Quaker meeting.

They Think Men Are Gabby

Furthermore, women have an exaggerated sense of time. They are, of course, infinitely more practical than men, and they know that time is limited. Men live in a beautiful kind of daze in which time is inexhaustible. That is why the supposedly hustling American business man usually dilutes his business hours with an infinite amount of plain and fancy chewing the rag. Furthermore, men really like politics. Women undertake it as a disagreeable and patriotic duty and want to get through with it just as soon as they decently can.

And lastly woman cherishes a deep unchangeable conviction that man is the gabby sex. She sees little sense to what he says and she would be obliged if he would be brief in saying it. Hence the brass dinner-bell, the interruption of Mr. Goodwin's climactic peroration, the redness of his face, his Parthian shot as he left the platform.

Personally, I think he chose the wrong word. Not one politician in a thousand is "high-brow." This goes for the ladies, too. A highbrow politician would be one who discusses public questions on the lofty and impersonal plain of Walter Lippmann. Essex County Republicanism is eminently practical. Its beloved representative, Mr. Andrews, is intellectual but not high-brow. And there is no evidence to date that Mrs. Gann is anything but her brother's affectionate and patriotic sister.

Certainly the great women politicians do not run to being high-brow. I doubt if Mrs. Rogers of Lowell is. Or "Ma" Ferguson of Texas. Or Mrs. McCormick, late of Chicago. Or Alice Longworth, the woman who never gave an interview. That, in itself, disposes of the accusation. Merely to be meticulously accurate about space-time relations, such as are involved in holding a stop-watch on an orator who is all inflated and tugging at the ropes, does not prove that one is a high-brow. Reluctantly we are forced to conclude that Mr. Goodwin, who has in the past found so many right words for so many wrong men, has himself found the wrong word.

Making G. O. P. Pols Too Classy

I suspect that what irked Mr. Goodwin was not the intellectual tone of the assemblage—it being Essex County, you remember—but its social toniness. Essex County is the home of old families who made their money in respectable silk and tea while Boston was making hers in rum and slaves. It is also the summer home of all kinds of great wealth, both local and distant. It shelters innumerable important legations for the hot spell. Essex County is very tony, indeed.

Now Mr. Goodwin has always had the reputation of caring less about the form than the substance. He is a rough-and-ready debater, who wears his coat-tails long and always has one eye cocked to see his shoulder to see who is likely to tread on them. Then he gets there first!

I can imagine that the atmosphere of the Essex County Women's Republican Club bothered him. There would be flowers and music and large pink ladies in lovely dresses very shimmery and summery, like a group photographed out of Vogue. There would be an elaborate pening ceremonial, perhaps even the salute to the flag. There would be Madame Chairman and Madame Secretary and Madame Recording Secretary until you couldn't rest. And there would be a large brass dinner bell tied with orchid-colored ribbons and festooned with goldenrod. But it would ring like a third alarm until the orator's voice fluttered in his throat from pure astonishment.

Afterwards there would be dainty refreshments on the lawn and the visiting pols would be introduced to at least a secretary of the Bulgarian legation and a couple of Episcopal bishops. At least!

No, "high-brow" is not the word. But there is a possibility that the ladies are making the Republican party a bit too tony for its own good.

MURDER ENDS FAMILY FEUD IN RANDOLPH

Father of Four Slain; Brother-in-Law Held Without Bail After Confessing Crime

James H. Kelley, 42, of Royal st., Randolph, had been summoned to appear in Quincy court today on charges of threatening Mrs. Francis W. Finch, his sister. He faced a two-year jail sentence, as he had been on probation on charges of drunkenness and firing a rifle near his home.

But, when Kelley was arraigned in Quincy court this morning, he was staring ahead to the electric chair or to life imprisonment on the charge of murdering Francis W. Finch, 38, his brother-in-law, father of four children

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Kelley pleaded not guilty and was committed to Dedham without bail for a hearing Oct. 3. Jeremiah McAnarney, counsel for Charles DuBois, for whose missing wife a state-wide search is being made, was retained as counsel for Kelley

The shooting, which took place last night, culminated a family feud of long standing. Only a short time before Kelley had received the summons to appear in court for threatening his sister on a complaint by Finch.

Kelley took a loaded 12-gauge shotgun and hid himself in the cellar of his mother's home in Mitchell st., Randolph. He knew Finch, who had been visiting his parents in Mattapan, would have to pass the house on the way to his own home.

FIRES FROM AMBUSH

As Finch approached, Kelley took aim. A spurt of flame spat from the cellar window. Finch staggered a few steps and then fell dead

Kelley fled immediately to the nearby woods and near Houghton's Pond, in the Blue Hills, told his story to Leander Shaw, a Metropolitan District Commission sewer department chauffeur

Shaw took Kelley to the police station, where he later made a statement of the killing to Police Chief Patrick McDonnell and pointed out the place where he had thrown the shotgun

Police say the dispute between Kelley and Finch arose over a strip of property to which he claimed ownership.

OPPOSED PROBATION

When he was last arrested for drunkenness and firing a rifle near his home, Chief McDonnell opposed probation and urged that Kelley be given a jail term, predicting that Kelley would some day shoot someone.

Finch is survived by a wife and four children, Arnold, 17; Eleanor, 9; Arnold, 6, and David, 4

POLICE REPORT ON WELFARE READY

Hultman to Turn Over Facts on First 500 Cases Today

The long awaited police report on the first 500 welfare cases to be rechecked will be complete, as far as existing records can make it, and in the hands of Acting-Mayor Edward Gallagher on Monday.

This announcement was made by Commr. Hultman today and will stand as his answer to the challenge of the welfare department issued Wednesday night, accusing him of malice and incompetence, and demanding proof that irregularities existed in the administering of welfare aid.

At the same time Rep. John V Mahoney of Boston, vice-chairman of the special legislative committee on public expenditures, scored aid fakers and predicted that unless remedial steps were taken by cities they would get scant sympathy from the legislature in any attempts to secure relief

Commissioner Hultman said his report would be completed late today and that his legal adviser, Leo P. Schwartz, is preparing a summarized legal finding on all cases where it was possible to obtain records. The commissioner declared it had been impossible to secure data on all the cases, in at least one-fifth there being no record of the recipient applying for aid

PROBE EVERETT FORGERIES

Charging that the petitions for Plan B for the new Everett charter are riddled with forged and fraudulent signatures, the Everett registrars of voters have not only thrown out the petitions, but have notified Dist. Atty. Bishop, who has assigned state detectives to investigate.

State Detectives Sherlock and O'Neil last night started to work on the names. Registrars turned over to them a large number of affidavits from persons whose names were signed to petitions who claim that they did not sign

2300 NAMES FORGED

Action of the registrars followed several days' work by handwriting experts. The petitions, bearing more than 3000 names, or more than enough to place the question on the ballot as a referendum were carefully checked.

Suspicion of the registrars was first aroused when very few people could be found who admitted to even seeing the petitions. Further study showed that long lists of names apparently had been signed by the same person.

As a result, all but 800 or 900 names were thrown out. This number of genuine signatures was far too small to comply with the law to place the matter on the ballot

DAVID FINCH

FRANCIS W. FINCH

WORDY BATTLE BRINGS REBUKE FROM BLOOD

Ex-Banker in Medford Trust Hearing Is Given Lie by Contractor Siegel

A verbal clash between Edwin T. McKnight, president of the closed Medford Trust Co., and Robert T. Bushnell, representing Bank Commissioner Guy, marked the hearing before Charles W. In answer to McKnight question why Slee visited the McKnight home, Slee said

"No, you were a friend of mine, and I was a friend of yours, I—"

Here McKnight interrupted him. "Let him answer," shouted Bushnell

"You're not going to scare me," retorted McKnight, hotly "If instead you treat me as a gentleman."

"I could not do it," answered Bushnell.

"You allow that man to insult me?" demanded McKnight of Master Blood

"If you wish to continue with this cross-examination," Blood warned McKnight, "you had better refrain from such remarks, or I'll stop the examination."

The coupe was badly damaged, being practically cut in half by its impact with the pole

LERMAN CHESTER PRIOR —Boston's best known hot-heard-about-the-world, hotel manager and Miss Spearmint of Leo "Wild Man of Music" Reisman . . . He belongs to four golf clubs, only played a game five times in his whole life, and sacrifices sleeping entirely in the nude because ora can never tell when calamity might drive one to the street where the gentle breezes are always wont to blow! . . .

First once-overed this mad, merry world on Oct. 9, 1893 . . . In Beachmont, . . . Has always enjoyed travelling . . . Making his first trip to Europe via the cattle boat route . . . Seeing more his first week on that trip than during any of the other seven trips he's since made over there . . . Loves theatrical people . . . Who vie for invites to his serving pantry . . . Where beverages plaintifully warm their hearts . . . While tears fill their eyes as they inspect the sentimental autographs of Famous Ones' photos that stud the pantry walls.

When he was a lad the girls in his schooldays used to call him "Lemon Pie"—which has him loathing lemon pie, with his very soul, to this day! . . . Also has nicknags of "Lem" and "L. C." . . . His hobbies consist of his untiring devotion for years to his hotel activities . . . And his keen appreciation in witnessing all the major sports in the Hub . . . Romance, Would You Think?

About 12 years ago he bought a dapple-gray horse . . . Rode him three times . . . Three years later gifted him to a lovely young lady on Long Island who calls him "Lenox" . . . 12 IN RACE FOR SEC. COOK'S BERTH

Eight Seek Youngman Post, While Republicans Have Only Two in Fight

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Democratic voters in Tuesday's primary, unless they have made up their minds in advance, will be faced with the perplexing problem of having to choose between eight candidates for lieutenant-governor and 12 for secretary of state.

The task of the Republicans on the other hand, will be comparatively simple with Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook unopposed and only two candidates for lieutenant governor. They are George G. Bacon, president of the State Senate, and Chester L. Campbell member of the governor's council from Quincy.

BACON HOLDS EDGE

While Bacon is looked upon as having the edge, Campbell's friends are predicting there will be a surprise when the votes are counted. The councillor is well and favorably known in the motoring field due to his position as manager of the annual automobile shows. Then, too, Bacon's advocacy of a cut in state employe's salaries has not endeared him to this large block of Republican voters and their friends.

Edward P. Barry, has position No. 1 on the ballot for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. He served in that position under Governor David I Walsh and ever since has been one of the dependable party wheel-horses. His name is more familiar to the rank and file of the Democracy than are the names of any of his seven opponents.

SEVEN OTHERS IN FIELD

These seven are David J. Brickley, former city councilor of Boston; Raymond A. Fitzgerald, Cambridge school committeeman; former State Senator William L. Hennessey, of Boston; City Councilor Francis E. Kelly, John F. Malley, internal revenue collector under the Wilson administration; Mayor Michael C. O'Neill, of Everett, and John E. Swift, of Milford, high official in a national fraternal order.

Strangely enough, public interest in this contest has been more or less centered on the tactics of Councillor Kelly, who got denials from both Governor Ely and Senator Walsh to reports that they looked with favor upon the candidacy of John E. Swift.

12 IN THIS RACE

Of the 12 Democrats in the scramble for secretary of state, Dr Joseph Santosmosso and Arthur G Flynn, both of Boston, as runners-up two years ago, loom as slight favorites among the political depesters. Former City Councilor George F. Gilbody, a member of the 20th (Yankee) Division, furnishes an attractive focus for the veteran vote.

The others in this contest are former State Senator John B Buckley, of Dorchester; J. Edward Callanan, of Newton; John W. Cussen of Boston; Geo. F. Grozan, Concord; former Rep. Edward J. Gurry, of Cambridge; John D O'Brien of Boston; Dr. Ray Shattuck, of Boston, and two other Boston men Charles R. Sullivan and Henry J Sullivan.

Mother Seeks Clue to Missing Youth

Mrs. Mary Turenne of 10 Richardson st., Woburn, is seeking her son Henry, 15, who disappeared June 15 leaving a note that he was going away to make a living for himself. His mother is particularly worried because the boy was not in good health when he left.

Henry Turenne

When he left he was wearing long dark trousers, blue shirt, light brown sweater with orange and black trimmings, black oxford shoes and no hat. He is a tall boy for his age, being about 5 feet 8 inches in height.

U. S. Misses Geneva Meeting

Geneva, Sept. 16 (US)—Germany and the United States were not represented at the meeting of the Budgetary Commission of the Disarmament Conference yesterday.

TRAFFIC JAMMED BY RAID

A traffic jam resulted when 3000 persons gathered to witness a raid on a speakeasy and brewing plant in Washington st., South End.

Witnesses jammed the thoroughfare and automobiles were unable to move as the agents slugged their way into the speakeasy in the rear of a barber shop. The proprietor jumped through a rear window on the second floor and made his escape over the roof of an adjoining building.

According to Field Agent Dennis T. Lordan, who led the agents 25 customers were lined against the bar when they entered. Six of the customers were arrested for drunkenness by the police when they arrived.

The agents seized beer, whiskey and alcohol and dismantled a brewing plant located on the second and third floors, where they found 1900 bottles of beer, a couple of tons of sugar and paraphernalia.

Soon after the sensational raid the agents made a raid at 124 Northampton st. and seized beer and liquor.

The Middlesex County Jail at East Cambridge now houses 101 prisoners awaiting trial for various offenses, this number being an increase of 25 per cent over the jail "population" a year ago.

Knights to Hold Outing

The annual outing of the Bunker Hill Council, Knights of Columbus, in Charlestown will take place on next Sunday at Wrenmere, Wrentham.

3-Year Term for Man in Manslaughter

Rocco Alessandro, 47, of Hanover st., was sent to the State Prison yesterday by Chief Justice Hall of the Suffolk Superior Court for a term of three to six years in connection with the death of Santo Caccioli of Harris st., North End, whom he stabbed to death with his pocket knife because of insults to Mrs. Alessandro.

MILTON SEWER TAX OUTLAWED

The town of Milton has been levying an illegal assessment upon its residents the Supreme Judicial Court in a decision written by Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg in the case of Annie F Mullen, who was assessed $1608.54 for a new sewer in the Church st. district.

The court held the statute relating to the construction of sewers constitutional but found that the town had no right to assess the abutter any part of the payments for the use and maintenance of the Metropolitan sewer system.

The tax to Mrs. Mullen was based on a frontage cost of $1.50 a foot and an additional cost of one and one-half cents per square foot of land within 100 feet of the street or sewer line. To this was added the proportionate part of the annual cost of the Metropolitan system.

Because of the illegal inclosure of the cost of the Metropolitan sewer the entire assessment which was levied as of April 22 and May 20, 1930, is quashed.

CONFUSED AUTO DRIVER WINS

When a white-gloved traffic officer wildly waves his hands, shouts and shrilly blows his whistle for him to stop, Fred Kelley, 19, of Newbury st. gets very much confused. In fact, he can't make sense out of it.

At any rate, Patrolman Leon Hearns, who does traffic duty in Orient Heights, testified before Judge Barnes in East Boston court today, that on the night of August 13, Kelley passed him three times within two hours. Shouts, whistles and hand signals availed Hearns nothing, so he finally chased Kelley and gave him a ticket.

"But your honor, it was night time, and I was confused," eKlley told Judge Barnes.

2 Held in Probe of Big Maine Rum Ring

Two Greater Boston men were arrested by federal officers as fugitives from justice in the southern Maine district of the United States court, where they are wanted in connection with one of the largest and most elaborate rum-running combinations ever alleged in this section, operating a fleet of speedboats and motor trucks and supplying liquor to the New England coast this summer, from Boothbay Harbor to the Hub.

Before United States Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney, the men refused to plead and declined to admit their identity.

Reading, Penn., Sept. 16 Roy McCrann, jockey, of Elizabeth, N J., was trampled to death and six others were injured in a pile-up during the first race at Reading's fair. Two others may die.

WATCH NUMBER AMNESIA CLUE

On the repair number of a woman's gold watch hinges the identity of a man believed to be from Boston, who has been in Bellevue Hospital, New York, suffering from amnesia since Tuesday.

According to police, the man who appears to be well-educated, was taken to the hospital after he had been found in a daze in the Pennsylvania Station.

He told police he had come to suddenly in the waiting-room, realizing he was hungry and thirsty, but with no recollection of his identity.

He carried a curious copper medallion with the letter "R" on a maroon background.

He is 35 or 40 years of age; wore a brown soft hat with the maker's name, John Rossetnik, Detroit; brown shoes, size 8B, and soft blue shirt with collar attached.

Invitations have been received and the young set who have received them are displaying them casually . . . it is that kind of a party, very select.

Bridal Couple Going Abroad

Of interest to Boston society circles is the news of the wedding of Miss Helen Stevens Schroeder, the daughter of Gulia de Gheuleere Schroeder and the late Mr. Schroeder of New York, to John Charles Philips, Jr., the son of Dr and Mrs. John Charles Phillips of Boston and Wenham.

The ceremony took place on Wednesday, at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Charles Lawrence Riker, of Rumson, N. J., and was a very quiet family event, in which only the immediate members of the bride and bridegroom's family were invited.

In Mother's Gown

The bride wore the same dress in which both her mother and her grandmother, Mrs. Berkeley Mastyn, were married. It is of an antique white crepe de chine, empire style with short puff sleeves and trimmed with the Schroeder ancestral lace. She wore a veil of old point lace caught up at the back with orange blossom, and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids.

Books—And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

This is an era of frankness. We used rather to admire a shy person; but now we say such a man or woman is inhibited. The psychoanalysts turn their spotlight on Miss A., and the poor dear is made to seem somewhat ridiculous.

Lady Duff Gordon suffers from no complexes of any kind, so far as I can discover, from reading her volume of reminiscences, call d "Discretions and Indiscretions" (Stokes). True, she tells us how, in her earliest childhood in Canada, she liked to see chickens being killed; and she admits that she cannot account for this cruelty in her nature. For she has always loved animals. Not that I give a [illegible] letters

Unkind to Suitors

Also, like most young girls, she was unkind to her many suitors. But she experienced her own hour of disaster, for one young man whom she greatly admired drifted away from her, and through pique she married, before she met Sir Cosmo Duff Gordon, the [illegible] who came a big [illegible] Lady Duff Gordon says she did not care. She had made up her mind, and nothing could stop her, and "It was 'Chelro,' the great painter, whose advice I took, which decided me." Which is probably as sensible a way as any to get a divorce.

She always liked clothes. As a child, she kept innumerable dolls, and fixed them up in fitting costumes. Likewise, she very early designed clothes for her younger sister, the famous Elinor Glyn.

Lady Duff Gordon generously admits that she hereself had not the classical features of the girl who was afterward to give us "Three Weeks"; she tells us that she slowly emerged from a tomboy into a very feminine, "and, I think, rather an attractive young lady." She made much of her the most beautiful thing in the world, "and that is all that a woman need do."

"I never knew the meaning of shyness, and so I found it easy to make friends," she naively says. "My self-esteem have found satisfaction in physical creation, in bearing and bringing up children, so I have found mine in creating a dream world of my own, and I used to step into it and shut the door behind me whenever the everyday facts of life appeared too dull and uninteresting."

• • •

A man who loved her very much once said to Lady Duff Gordon: "Nothing but the white heat of passion can forge the spark of genius." And she has never forgotten it, and hopes it is true. "It certainly was in one respect, for no two people were ever more passionately in love than my father and mother were when I was born . . . Yet, if genius is the faculty of creating and seeing beauty in everyday life, then indeed my friend spoke truly and I possess it."

• • •

Celebrities

Lady Duff Gordon has led a full life and has met many celebrities in her time. She likes to chat of them. Very early she struck a friendship with Ellen Terry, then at the height of her fame. She often visited her, and frequently saw Henry Irving at her house. One day Miss Terry said to her "Will Mr Bernard Shaw please take notice"):

People always say that Henry is my lover, of course. He isn't. As a matter of fact he never sees further than my head. He does not know I even have a body." (That is one of the indiscretions, I suppose.)

Lady Duff Gordon has been a success. She has been poor, and vastly rich, by turns. No one will deny that she has worked hard. Her dressmaking establishment conducted under the name of Lucile was world famous.

When America came into the war Mrs Peabody made her way forward the war zone. Nobody could resist the claims of patriotism when they were put forward by 'the world's sweetheart,' and her wide-opened hazel eyes were guaranteed to make even the most hard-headed business man part with his money. I designed her a special dress to wear on the tour—it was of khaki-colored cloth, and had a semi-military cut, which was both apt and becoming."

• • •

Creative Talent

After this anecdote, so sweetly told, she "turns the leaves of my picture album again, and I see the portrait of Billy Sunday":

"Billy Sunday was one of those amazing revivalists who every now and then arise in America. When I first heard of him he was converting thousands of New Yorkers, from the Four Hundred (sic) down to the stevedores and laborers who used to throng his meetings. Society at first inclined to scoff, was confounded when the Rockefellers joined the ranks of his supporters and built him a wooden tabernacle on Washington Heights at 168th st.

Lady Duff Gordon designed the costumes for many plays and particularly for the Ziegfeld Follies. No one will deny her creative talent

All her friends seem to have had "a wonderful sense of humor"; and Jessie Bond, who sang in Gilbert and Sullivan operas, "was a very charming woman, witty and amusing to talk to" (there were no anecdotes to prove this) "and always made a great fuss over me."

The book will amuse you. It certainly entertained me for an hour yesterday.

Luncheon for Miss Proctor

At Biythswood, Little's Point Swampscott, today, an important event in the society world takes place in the form of a luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Proctor for their second daughter, Miss Frances L. Proctor.

The luncheon is an informal preliminary function to her presentation on Oct. 26, at a dance at the family town house on Commonwealth ave., and which will be the center of attraction for most of the social elite of this city, as well as one of the principal opening events of the debutante season

Miss Proctor is a graduate of Miss Winsor's school, and is an attractive and popular young lady. Like her sister, Miss Barbara Proctor, who came out in 1928-29, she will probably figure prominently in future society events.

Mr. H. Harmon Proctor is the debutante's brother.

BOOKS AND CHARACTERS

By LINCOLN KIRSTEIN

Our Humor Is Often Very Sad

America has made several contributions of independent originality to the history of human development in the 300 odd years of its growth. Aside from structural engineering, the skyscraper, radio which if we didn't invent we at least developed, there is a single spiritual gift we actually have given to the rest of the world. This gift is intangible, often incommunicable to anybody but an American born and bred, and it has hardly any material value. It is that quality of irony, self-observation and self-deprecation which we know under the loose generalization of "humor."

It is a most salutary gift and keeps a lot of people in these unhumorous times from going as far away from the likelihood of any perspective that they "lose" their "sense of humor" and jump out of the skyscrapers and off the bridges.

American humor, in its dissimilarity from other national kinds of humor, is distinguished by several considerations which almost disqualify it from the commonly imagined categories of humor In many cases it seems singularly unfunny. The light-hearted touch of gaiety, the easy whimsy, or the haphazard nonsense of English, or Anglo-Saxon comedy, has no real place on this side of the Atlantic.

Lincoln Kirstein

• • •

Our humor, from the stories of Yankee pedlars to the dry grin of Abraham Lincoln's anecdotes which so irritated his pompous cabinet, to the bitterness of Mark Twain and O. Henry, has gradually fused together into a national comic style which in its essential cruelty and pitiless social commentary strikes so many foreign observers as either incomprehensible or the reverse of comic.

• • •

Laughs on Others

It is very hard to define precisely the particular concatenation of associations or events which causes one to laugh If something is genuinely funny we can be pretty sure it will have a direct physical effect on us Somewhere, somehow, our belly-muscles contract, the condition extends up through our physical frame and we make a noise like laughter.

A man sliding on a banana peel, a man running without his pants, a man missing a train can strike us, in the right setting, as extremely funny. The spring of the fun here is in someone else's discomfort The more they are discomfited the more we laugh.

• • •

Why? Perhaps our laugh is really pitiful—that is full of pity. We laugh at their helplessness in the face of fate, the accidental banana peel—we recognize we too might slip and fall,—that slipping and falling is a human fallacy which is too serious to cry about, so we laugh it off. We laugh it as a kind of helpless protection. We pull ourselves up by the bootstraps of our own ridicule and laugh at something in the process we are above the accident of woe.

• • •

Our American humor is extremely unkind, and its intensity of keenness is in direct proportion to the pain or the object of our laughter. The humor in the weekly New Yorker, for example, is extremely cruel, if anyone considers its actual implications. Lots of the fun comes from the parody of some popular conventions of advertisements, fads, social conventions etc. The fun is in the contrast of a heavy, dumpy man who needs a shave, staring heavy-lidded at a shapeless, drab woman lying on a beach in a soggy bathing suit with the four words underneath As You Desire Me

If Greta Garbo hadn't appeared in the film of the same name, if a soap hadn't used the title as an advertisement, if the whole country hadn't been [illegible] as to the [illegible] of the Garbo face, the New Yorker draws two exhausted eyes [illegible] on a dusty beach in the same drab manner. If suave elegance as the soap ads, it's terribly funny.

But the fun is terrible. It's not "good-humored," kindly or gay When the man who was sentenced in he electrocuted said to the judge, "Picture my embarrassment," the newspapers reported that the courtroom roared. The condemned man, as a matter of fact, had an excellent sense of modern American humor.

Hoover's Little Joke

Last year was published that embarrassing little book called "Oh, Yeah!" It showed in unmistakable, terrifying sequence all the official optimism of the men who govern this country down through the darkest days of the depression. As things grew worse in Wall Street, as the Secretary of the Treasury, etc., etc., assured the aching world that prosperity was just around the corner. The book was a funny book. Except that its ultimate effect on any thinking person was sudden anger.

• • •

Now comes "Who's Hooey—Nuttifications of the Notable," compiled and annotated by Arthur Zipser and George Novack, and published by E. P. Dutton. Like any considerable amount of American humor, Who's Hooey" won't be funny very long It is intensely topical, and in another years time most of the topics will have been forgotten. But for the present day, week, and month, it is a very malicious, irritating, mildly disgusting and idiotic book.

• • •

Other Funny Things

In brief, it's humorous it is also a short history of the last year in American taste in politics, art and society. It elevates hypocrisy and greed to a new high and would seem fictitious and synthetic if one weren't sure it's all too true For example

MAJ-GEN. SMEDLEY D. BUTLER (gives a minority opinion I know when to keep my mouth shut.

TEXAS GUINAN (gives this little girl a hand): I'm just a little girl

WALTER WINCHELL (hands himself an orchid): They can't tell me I haven't a lot of friends.

HENRY FORD (keeps his head clear): I don't like to read books; they muss up my mind.

JAMES J. WALKER (never gets a break): I always enjoy doing my duty.

ROGER W. BABSON, economist (qualifies his statement): I unqualifiedly disapprove of gambling both on ethical grounds and because it is a losing proposition.

RUDY VALLEE (takes a census): I think those who still not be interested in me after my marriage will be insignificant in number.

J. P. MORGAN (in blissful ignorance): I don't know anything about any depression

But perhaps it can all be summed up in the quote of Northampton's dollar-a-word words.

THE GIRL WHO DREADS PARTIES -:- Just a Case of 'Inferiority' -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Reliance on Oneself Needed

"WHY DO I have to get up my nerve to go to a party? No raw recruit ever went into battle with greater terror than I. When I lay my chiffon frock on the bed and begin to get ready to go to a party, it's worse than cannons roaring.

"Sometimes I make up excuses, miserable lies they are, too, and back out at the last minute. Sometimes I fight myself into going and am surprised when I have a lovely time—but the next time I'm invited out I have the same battle to go through with, all over again. Am I a nut, to be so shy, so bashful, so distrustful of myself, or what is the matter with me? People tell me I'm pretty, but I have no faith in myself. I just feel inferior."

LACK OF CONFIDENCE.

A girl who signed herself Minna B. wrote the above and there was more of confession. Her struggles with a lack of confidence in herself. As she is only seventeen, we may attribute the greater part of her party panics to youth. She doesn't tell me anything about her childhood. Was she snubbed on all occasions by some unsympathetic grown-up? I wish she had told me.

For the unsympathetic wish constantly, but it is a thing which fills me with indignant rage that so much of childhood goes out into the world a victim of an inferiority complex. Children are naturally sensitive to their own awkwardness and to their own inferiority and are quick to imitate the kind of people who make fun of them. Dumpish at the kind of home and all the kind men cannot put their poor little broken egos together again.

SHYNESS GOES

Much of the wretched misery of inferiority seems to be a hangover from those early days and to crush a child so as to bring it to the surface. As for Minna and all the other girls and boys who write me of their martyrdom with shyness, please let me say that a sense of one's awkwardness is not without its charm.

Twenty years from now Minna will look back and realize how charming she was when she laid her chiffon frock on the bed and dreaded the party.

A Question of Etiquette

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is it proper to let a boy kiss you and put his arm round you the first time you go out with him or should you wait till the second or third time? My girl friend says it's cheap to let a fellow kiss you the first time, but the boy who took me out last week said it would be all right. I didn't let him kiss or pet me and he was very angry and said I wasn't worth wasting gasoline on, and so he parted. A day or two later I heard from a friend that he got into some sort of law trouble, and wasn't I glad I wasn't worth wasting gasoline on when it happened. FLYNN.

Dear Flynn:

Refer be governed by your heart when it comes to kissing, and don't let your heart run away with you too quickly or easily. Etiquette, as such, has little or no concern in the matter of kissing. Well-bred girls do not go in for immediate and promiscuous love-making. There's a bit too fastidious for that. And the sensible girl reserves her kisses for the man she really loves, even though she may be kissed. And she has found in her heart of hearts that for the young man who wasn't worth wasting gasoline on, and who was arrested and sent into trouble, she will

Lydia E. Pinkham's VEGETABLE COMPOUND

'INVASION' -:- -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

A young gentleman speaking on a car that draws up alongside the green feathery expanse of the piney woods around a great water-supply lake. Peaceful it was, untouched, a fence sternly guarding with the words, "Keep Out—NO Trespassing—Prosecution—by Order of—" "No picnickers here! Gosh, I'd like to get out here and head straight into that place and sit me down on the clear edge of the State's blue water . . . but it's a good thing I can't! It's human to get to the deep secret places of the world and there Pan is—and when we got there he would stay there no more!"

The young man spoke truth. The best-meaning of us have a way of spoiling the dusky cleanness of the wilderness. We leave papers there when we have had our fun! Pan is there until we come—and then he goes. He hates noise, save the subtle clamor of the woods.

As long as Glorietta and Gene are in love and human they will hunt out the farthermost place where their picknebook and their lime will take them, and as long as they are human the faery world will flee before them.

Glorietta will tickle Pan on the nose if she finds him. But she will see and hear him no more. He does not picnic with human-kind. Not even with lovers!

Peach Pie Hits Spot

September Season for Luscious Fruit

By MARTHA LEE

SEPTEMBER is a banner month chez Lee; first, because it was two years ago this September that we acquired the world's best chow puppy, and second, because it brings us the cream of the peach crop.

Coming down from Vermont Labor Day we picked up, in Bolton (by which route we avoided all traffic), a basket of the sweetest and juiciest peaches in captivity and we've been revoling in Peach Pollys and deep peach pie and whatnots (probably I should have said, "They've been revelling—I'm dieting, as you know) and successfully to host and eat my peaches as of

Sweet Peach Pie

Sift 1 cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon sugar and 1 teaspoon baking powder into a bowl. Add 1 beaten egg and 1 tablespoon melted butter and work to a dough with 1 cup milk. Roll out on floured board and fit into pie tins. Take enough peaches to fill pie tins. Add 1 cup sugar and 1 tablespoon flour and mix well. Pour into pie tins and bake in hot oven (400 deg. F.) about 30 minutes. Serve with whipped cream, or sour cream sauce. (Fresh peaches with a little sugar and cream syrup can be used instead, if desired.)

Peach Polly

Arrange a layer of canned peaches in a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with a cup of sugar and with 1 tablespoon of flour mixed with 2 cups of soft white bread crumbs. Pour over the top of the pudding the juice drained from the peaches (if peaches were canned in water, add 1 tablespoon of butter). Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) and serve with whipped cream, or sour cream sauce. (Fresh peaches with a little sugar and cream syrup can be used instead, if desired.)

Peach Roll

Make a baking powder biscuit dough out of 1½ cups flour, 3 tsps. baking powder, ½ tsp. salt, 3 tbsps. shortening, ¾ cup milk. Roll into an oblong shape. Place 3 cups stoned peaches in the center, reserving 2 halves for the sauce. Roll up the dough, pinching ends and sides carefully. Steam 1 hour and serve with thin sauce: To the peach syrup add the 2 peaches pressed through a sieve. Add 1 tbsp. sugar mixed with 1 tsp. almond extract and boil over the fire. Thicken with 1 tsp. cornstarch mixed with a little cold water. Pour over the roll and serve.

Peach Cobbler

Make a batter of 1 cup flour, 1 tsp. baking powder, ½ tsp. salt, 1 tbsp. sugar, 1 egg, ½ cup milk and 1 tbsp. melted butter. Pour into a buttered baking dish and add 3 cups stoned peaches. Sprinkle with 1 cup sugar and bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) about 30 minutes. Serve with cream.

Peach Ice Cream

Make a boiled custard of 1 cup milk, 1 egg yolk, 2 tbsps. sugar and ½ tsp. vanilla. Cool and add 1 cup cream, whipped, and 1 cup peaches, mashed and sweetened to taste. Freeze.

Peach Shortcake

Make a rich biscuit dough and bake in a shallow pan. Split and butter while hot and fill with sliced peaches sweetened to taste. Cover with whipped cream and serve.

Peach Tapioca

Soak ½ cup tapioca in 2 cups water for 2 hours. Add ½ cup sugar and cook in double boiler until clear. Add 1 cup peaches, mashed and sweetened to taste, and cook 5 minutes longer. Serve cold with cream.

Peach Fritters

Make a batter of 1 cup flour, 1 tsp. baking powder, ½ tsp. salt, 1 egg, ½ cup milk and 1 tbsp. melted butter. Dip peaches in batter and fry in deep fat. Drain on brown paper and serve with sugar and cream.

Peach Meringue

Make a custard of 1 cup milk, 1 egg yolk, 1 tbsp. sugar and ½ tsp. vanilla. Cook in double boiler until thick. Pour over 1 cup peaches, mashed and sweetened to taste, in a baking dish. Cover with meringue made of 1 egg white beaten stiff with 2 tbsps. sugar and brown in moderate oven (350 deg. F.).

Peach Ice

Make a syrup of 1 cup sugar and 1 cup water and boil 5 minutes. Add 1 cup peaches, mashed and sweetened to taste, and freeze.

Peach Sherbet

Make a syrup of 1 cup sugar and 1 cup water and boil 5 minutes. Add 1 cup peaches, mashed and sweetened to taste, and freeze.

Peach Mousse

Make a custard of 1 cup milk, 1 egg yolk, 2 tbsps. sugar and ½ tsp. vanilla. Cook in double boiler until thick. Add 1 cup peaches, mashed and sweetened to taste, and 1 cup cream, whipped. Freeze.

Peach Cream Pie

Make a custard of 1 cup milk, 1 egg yolk, 2 tbsps. sugar and ½ tsp. vanilla. Cook in double boiler until thick. Pour over 1 cup peaches, mashed and sweetened to taste, in a baked pie shell. Cover with meringue made of 1 egg white beaten stiff with 2 tbsps. sugar and brown in moderate oven (350 deg. F.).

Peach Pudding

Make a batter of 1 cup flour, 1 tsp. baking powder, ½ tsp. salt, 1 egg, ½ cup milk and 1 tbsp. melted butter. Add 1 cup peaches, mashed and sweetened to taste, and steam 1½ hours. Serve with sauce.

Peach Sauce

"MARY FAITH"

How a Fascinating Heroine Met Old Problems in a New Way — by the Author of "The Flapper Wife," Etc.

By BEATRICE BURTON

'I seem to have picked a funny place to talk to you like this," he said awkwardly. 'Mary Faith, don't you know I'm in love with you? My mother does. She spotted it the first day you came out to the house—"

"Oh, don't!" Mary Faith was shaking her head. "Please don't go on talking like this—"

Keep it. . . And she wanted to stop him before he asked her to marry him.

"You don't care for me, Mary Faith?"

Tells Him of Kim

She wanted to tell him that she did care for him; that she cared so passing much that any joy in life would be impossible for her if she couldn't have him. But she must tell him about Kim. She must explain why she could not marry him.

"I have been waiting," he said, quietly persistent. "I've known I felt this way about you ever since that night last fall when you told me you were going to be married. I must have been in love with you long before that, without realizing it. When you came to the next morning and said you'd broken your engagement it was like giving me a new lease on life."

"Wait just a minute, please," Mary Faith interrupted him. "I didn't break my engagement. I bet you absolutely everybody else in town I did—to save my face."

She caught her breath and went on:

"The man I was going to marry broke it. He was in love with another girl and he came and told me so . . . all was the man who spoke to me in Armbruster's just now. The girl was with him. At least I suppose it was the girl."

Kim had thrown her bridle like a hook that he had finished reading and was carried Mi... I don't think it was only fair to tell him the truth.

"I'll never give the snap of my finger for anyone again in that way," she said. "I must have given him all the love I had to give anybody."

Then walked on in silence. And in silence they got into the gray car and started for Mrs. Puckett's. Where they were finally the Mark Nesbit spoke again.

Feared She'd Hate Him

"You're very young to look at things like this, Mary Faith. One love affair that turned out badly isn't the whole show. You have a long life ahead of you, and you've got to live it. I saw seen a good deal of me the last few weeks, and you've seen me very happy. You do like me, don't you?"

"I wish I could tell you how much I like you," she said, "but I don't feel about you as I did about Kim—"

"I like him now," she thought. "But if I married him I'd probably stop liking him. I'd grow to hate him because he wasn't Kim."

There was a rich smell of vegetable soup in Mrs. Puckett's house that night. Mr. McClintock was walking up and down the hall when Mary Faith came in waiting for supper to be served. He opened the room doors. He lived from one meal to the next.

A knock came on the door, and then Agnes' voice: "Miss Fenton there's a gentleman downstairs to see you."

Mary Faith opened the door. "It's Mr. Farrell, ma'am. Mr. Farrell that used to come to see you, you know."

Agnes was smiling. She had always liked Kim and given him extra portions of cream and dessert when he came to the house for meals.

Kim was waiting for her at the foot of the stairs. His fur collared overcoat was on the hall table, and he was turning and twisting his hat in his hands as he watched her come down the last flight of steps.

The minute the front door had closed upon them he burst forth:

"Mary Faith, I've been like a crazy man for the last few hours! To see you walk into that store and let that fellow buy a ring for you! To see my girl with another man! Good Lord, I couldn't stand it, Mary Faith!"

"I wore your ring for a good many years, Kim. I wore it until you took it away from me," Mary Faith said quietly.

He nodded, his hand pressed to his temples. "I know—I know. Don't talk to me about it. Don't tell me what a fool I was."

Mary Tells Him

"You can believe me or not, but I love you more this minute than I ever did in my life before."

"Only because you think I'm someone else's," Mary Faith answered him. "You haven't wanted to see me for three months, Kim. You've been perfectly happy with that girl. You were perfectly happy with her tonight in that store where you were buying her a mesh bag."

Pity and Tenderness

"Now, let's not talk about her!" he said irritably. "She doesn't mean a thing to my life any more and she knows it. I haven't seen her more than three or four times in the last month. I haven't even anybody—I've been restless and down in the dumps for a long time, but I didn't know what ailed me until you came walking into Armbruster's tonight with that fellow. Then I knew I'd been missing you all the time."

He lifted his blond head and looked at her. The light from the street lamp shone on his face. He was anxious and grave, very unlike his usual debonair self.

"Kim, listen to me—I'm not engaged to Mark Nesbit. That ring we were picking out wasn't a ring for me but a Christmas present for his sister, Judith. I've never thought of marrying anybody but you. I've never cared for anyone else—and if you never had come back to me I'd probably have spent my whole life right here in River st., waiting for you."

She gave a shaky little laugh. "You know it, too. That's the worst of it, Kim. You're too sure of me."

He shook his head. "No, I'm not sure of you," he said; "and that's why I've made up my mind to marry you tomorrow."

He put his arms around her and pulled her close to him. He pressed back her head with one swift hand and his face came down over hers, blotting out the stars, as he kissed her.

Wedding Plans

"I'll telephone Dr Pomeroy tonight and ask him if he'll meet us in the chapel at 11 o'clock," his voice ran on. "And I'll ask the Maidons to come down. We're supposed to have a couple of witnesses, aren't we?"

Dr. Pomeroy was the rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest where Kim and Kim had always planned to be married. But who were the Maidons? She never had heard Kim mention them.

"Who are the Maidens, Kim?" she asked.

He thought a minute or two.

"Why, I guess you haven't met them," he said at last. I haven't known them so very long, myself, but they're pals of mine. Jack Maidon is in our place. He and Claire have been married only two or three months. You'll like Claire. They're going to be grand persons."

Mary Faith stirred in his arms. "I'd like to ask Jean Bartlett to the wedding. She's my best friend, and she was beginning when she stopped her.

"No. We're not going to have any of your friend Nesbit's office help around," he said firmly. "You're through with all that crowd, so forget them. I'm not going to tell even my mother about the wedding until it's all over . . . Now, let me tell you where I thought we'd spend our honeymoon."

She settled back to listen.

"You remember that aunt of mine who lives down in Carrsville, Mary Faith?"

"Aunt Ella Goad, you mean?"

Mary Is Happy

She was a plump and pleasant person with a passion for movin, pictures, fountain pen ... and coffee and cake between meals. Mary Faith had always liked her and she said so now.

"Well, she's come up to town to stay with my mother over the holidays," said Kim, "and I'm going to ask her to lend us her house down in Carrsville for the next two weeks."

"Kim! Do you think she'll let us have it?" Mary Faith's eyes shone in the darkness. "Won't it be lovely if she does!—I can cook all the things you like to eat, and get your bath ready in the morning and put the collar buttons in your shirt!—And you can build the fires and shovel the snow off the walks so that I can get out of the yard when I want to go to market—"

"I'll drive you there in the car so that you won't get your cute feet all cold and wet," Kim said "I'm going to take doggone good care of my wife."

Theater Cape and Evening Dress

SKETCHED IN PARIS

Rustling Silks in Favor for Winter

PARIS, Sept. 16—Taffeta faille and other silk fabrics that rustle and swish may possibly be one of the big winter fashions. Practically all the big fine de la Paix houses use one of the rustling silks in one form or another as sash trimmings, with sashends that hang to the floor, as inspired auras to be worn as dresses; under autumn and winter coats; as petticoats under lace dresses, or as entire dresses themselves

Chanel is one of the houses that favors taffeta petticoats Under many of her lace and net dresses there are one, and sometimes two, of the stiff taffeta petticoats with unhemmed pink edges that are reminders of ballons of the late nineties.

Mirande makes a stunning evening ensemble with heavy silk faille as a base. There is a dress of the faille, in dark, rich, wine red, and a tiny matching cape of the same red in velvet edged with fur.

The dress is fashioned entirely of the faille, without one bit of contrasting material or color in its makeup. The blouse portion is fitted close to the figure, with a wide square decolletage at the front and a deep V-shaped one at the back. Designed to be worn either for dinner, the theater or for dancing, the bodice is cut low over some elbow length sleeves which are finished off at the elbows with big puffs of the fabric The skirt is full, and has a cartridge-pleat decoration of the fabric at its hem.

Home Without Love

By WINIFRED BLACK

How lovely it is here on the [illegible] top! Mountain meadows—how delightful they are, like a calm, evening-tinted floor after a day with a lot of flighty gossipers

We have, in a pe[illegible] house in the mountains mostly in June two or three times and I—and it was like living in some simple old folktale, with a whispering aspen and the tall, melancholy firs for a background, and all around the house a tangle of wild syringa and wild azaleas, pink and white, and honeysuckle too sweet for human words to describe.

The troubled city below seems like the remnant of some unreal dream. The mountain quail call to each other in the brush, and the blue jays are busy telling the secrets of the forest to all who have the time and the wit to listen.

But there is something missing Some sweet, vagrant charm has gone.

The sun is bright in the sky. The leaves are turning crimson and gold and the sharp, spicy smell of wood smoke is clean in the air. But—Oh, I know now what it is that is gone.

The syringa blossoms have fallen to the ground, the wild azaleas have ceased their blooming for this year, and, saddest of all, the honeysuckle does not blossom now.

I spent an evening with the young couple I know and love so well that it seems like a part of my own family circle. They have been married a year, and they are very much in love with each other.

They are very much in love with each other, and they are very much in love with their little dining room. The fire was lit on the hearth in the softly shaded lamplight. There was a little music, and some pleasant talk.

But something was missing. Something missing something sweet, and vague and illusive and magical. I felt it, but I did not know what it was I missed.

Today I understand. I have had a letter from a friend in the city, and she tells me that the young couple are [illegible]

So that was what I missed. Love, the fragrant love the illusive love, the mysterious [illegible] veiled in the news that Miss Julia P. Dunham and Acting Capt. James P. Meehan were married on July 30.

VALENTINE -:-

By Hazel Livingston

A Heart-Gripping Novel Depicting Love and Disillusionment

IT WAS a letter from Aunt Julia's house, from the stilted parties Val was accustomed to, where people dressed up and took tall drinks around for an hour or two with strained smiles waiting for everybody to get there, and nobody really had any fun until after refreshments were served.

Yet these people . . . no use pretending Val knew . . . they weren't good. These men, some of them at least, had been waiting for them at home, while they "dropped in" at Minnie-what-[illegible] Yet they had more fun than the "good" people at home.

There was an answer Val was sure there was an answer for that, but she couldn't find it. She tried to talk about it to Millie on one of their rare afternoons at home alone

"Millicent . . . these girls, Miss O'Hara and Miss Greene, and the others . . . they're . . . they're not doing just right, do you think I mean, wouldn't Mr. Crosby, Mr. Sheridan and who and the others, feel very badly if they knew?"

Millie turned her long, dark eyes on Val "Not knowing the ladies I wouldn't possibly say."

Val turned the leaves of the magazine on her knee. "I can't help but wonder, I think about them, because I'm going to be a wife myself, . . . Not that Joe is likely to have a yacht and a lot of money, and do things like that."

THESE HUSBANDS

Val was angry too

"What do you think I mean? I'm not a child. Do you think I don't know what it's all about? Can't I see that Miss O'Hara—"

"I don't know a thing about Oswald Crosby and Nell O'Hara, and I don't ask any questions. Of course it's pretty obvious that Nell, I dare say, he's keeping her But I'm not going to cut off my nose to spite my face, to snub her Besides, she's a nice girl and secretary to one of the biggest men in Santa Barbara, and very refined looking, and the same with the others, They—"

"I know. That's what I mean. They seem nice enough, and they certainly have more fun than the girls I know at home, and what I know they aren't nice really and—"

Valentine MacFarlane, if I thought you'd be fool enough to be influenced by these—these hussies—do you think I'd have brought you here for one single minute? They aren't nice, and they don't have fun They lead dogs' lives, every one of them, even if they are done up like circus horses

"Oh, Millie' Millicent, I mean' Don't lecture me like Aunt Julia. I'm not going to copy them!"

"I should say you aren't! If I thought, for one minute—"

"Millie' Please' I just meant that they have such lovely things, and go so many wonderful places, and the girls at home—"

Valentine!" Millie was shocked Shocked clear through. "How can you compare your friends at home with these—well—how can you compare them" What difference does it make whether your nice girl friends in Oakland have a lot of clothes or not? None at all. Why, the happiest time of my life I was so darn poor I didn't know what it was to have an extra pair of silk stockings.

"Do you think fine clothes make a lady? Do you think I'd speak to one of those girls if I weren't and I were mar—I mean, if Vincent wasn't married and he could marry me? But it is, people would not understand that our case is different, so we can't go around with the people like you go with, and we have to go with this crowd and it —it just kills me—

BROKEN WORDS

Millie broke off. Her voice sobs that shook her lovely body in its exotic lounging robe Millie lived in lounging robes and pajamas as much as possible, because her street clothes, to please Vincent, were so conservative.

Val tried to comfort her. She didn't know what to say, or what to do Millie cried so hard her face looked quite disfigured. [illegible] brought her an icepack and sat beside her, holding her long fingers by hand.

"Don't you confess me with those crazy women. Do you hear me, Valentine" Don't you think for one moment—"

"No Millie—of course not—"

"Because I tell you, I may be unconventional, but I certainly would not have a thing to do with ONE of them if the men weren't friends of Vincent's and under the circumstances I have to be decent to them.

"But you wait until I'm Mrs. Vincent Shaler, and you'll see how long I'll have that crowd around! I'll show them . . . Oh Val' If it were now! The things I'd do for you. I tell you, Vincent has money. You wouldn't believe how much. This house is nothing. Why, the house in Palm Beach has been in all its 11 acres of landscape gardening and then she spends most of her time around here.

"Well, you will! You'll see. Kiss me, Val, and say you forgive me. I'm a darling, and tell Vincent I'm not feeling well, and will bring him home Hot milk toast and tea and lemon—

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

The Flaming Youths. Also Grizzled Vets. Koenig and Lazzeri.

Nothing Wrong With .400 Batting Eyes

FLAMING YOUTH in sport is a great thing. It has been the deciding factor in many sports battles. But it must be tempered with seasoning and experience. Especially is this true in baseball and the ring. Only last week we Bostonians saw Ad Zachow, a flaming frstic youth, chopped into boarding house hash by a seasoned campaigner, Lou Brouillard. Lou himself still boasts the magic qualities of youth. But it is mixed with seasoning and experience. Without seasoning and experience flaming youth is like near beer. It has no kick. Once in a while Flaming Youth "makes" a ball club. That was the case of the Yankees of 1926 when the late Miller Huggins plugged up infield gaps with young Mark Koenig and Tony Lazzeri and marched on to the pennant. But more often in baseball flaming youth until tempered and seasoned, cracks in the heat of conflict and has to be replaced by veteran material. Recall how young Floyd Vaughan sparkled and scintillated for the Pirates early this season, only to crack and blow up when June wore into July, and July merged with August? Sage, canny old George Gibson gave the youngster a chance to steady down and regain his poise. Then seeing the time was too short Gibson benched Vaughan, plugged up the hole with old Jack Thevenow and the Pirates rallied and won 11 in a row.

CONSIDER BOTH world's series combatants, the Yankees and the Cubs, and Flaming Youth. When the race started Joe McCarthy thought he had a million dollar wonder in young Jack Saltzgaver. Rogers Hornsby thought young Bill Jurges was just the one to hold down second or third base for the Cubs. But Saltzgaver is back in the minors now and Jurges is on the bench. In their places are the two "youngsters" of the 1926 world's series, Lazzeri and Koenig, now considered war-worn and battle-scarred veterans. Neither Yankees or Cubs could have won the pennant without the two veterans. Both teams are counting heavy on them in the big baseball conflict which will be filling the sports pages a fortnight hence.

YOU MAY SING about the speed and curves of Lon Warneke, the great Cub pitching corps, and the brilliance of Cuyler and other Cub stars, but the man the Yankees fear the most is old Mark Koenig. They not only fear Mark's big bat—he has been hitting around .400 since Charlie Grimm plucked him from the Mission Club of the Pacific Coast League to don big league spangles once again—and his brilliant fielding, but they fear most his baseball brains and what he knows of each and every man in the Yankee array. Koenig knows just as much, perhaps more, about his old team mates, the Yankees, as Joe McCarthy knows about his old hirelings, the Cubs. When it comes to knowing all about the other guys Koenig and McCarthy are checkmates.

NATURALLY JOE McCARTHY has no love for the club from which he was deposed as manager after piloting them into a world's series and keeping them well up front during his entire regime. Just as naturally Koenig wants nothing more than to beat the old aggregation from which he was banished after long and faithful service with the hint of being too brittle and shop-worn for major league use. There will be a world of real feeling in the big baseball shindy between the teams from the Boule Mich and Broadway. It will be a battle with the bark on.

ALTHOUGH, WHEN THE Yankees let Koenig go, it was said his old soup bone had lost its whip and he was becoming brittle in the underpinnings, the real trouble with Mark was his eyes. Mark always was an intense reader. Night times you always would find him up in his hotel room poring over a book. Playing in bright sunlight in the daytime and reading under brilliant electric lights at night put such a strain on his eyes that Koenig became afflicted with astigmatism. Mark was fitted with glasses but it did no good. Finally one oculist examined him and ordered an immediate cessation from reading and prescribed a series of muscular exercises for his eyes. From that day on Koenig's eyesight improved. It's O. K. now. There's nothing the matter with any eyes that can see the ball well enough for the owner to bat .400 and time and judge the weirdest bounders and hoppers in the uncanny way Mark Koenig is gobbling them up and pegging 'em over to first base.

BALL PLAYERS ARE wondering, just what is going to happen when Babe Ruth and Koenig get to "riding" each other. When Babe and Mark were team mates the Babe used to take delight in getting the goat of the fiery little infielder. While playing hearts en route from New York to Chicago once the Babe riled up Koenig to such fever heat that Mark lost his head and hung a healthy man-sized clout right in the middle of Babe's physiognomy. If Babe hadn't kept his own head there would have been war, there and then. But the big fellow simply pinioned Mark's arms and whispered sweet nothings in his ear until Mark cooled down. Koenig was a youngster then, chockful of Flaming Youth. With seasoning has come balance and poise. Babe will not find his Angora so easy to get now as once, for Flaming Youth has become tempered with seasoning and experience. Besides, Koenig is one of those fiery tempered athletes who are cool as ice in the heat of battle.

BUT SAY, FOLKS, isn't it funny what a difference just a few years make in sport? Six short years ago the fans were calling Mark Koenig and Tony Lazzeri, the "kid infielders." Now, six short years later—both Mark and Tony now are only 28, we believe—they are known as gray and hoary old veterans. On the diamond, in the ring, on all fields of sport, it doesn't take long for Flaming Youth to fade into the sere and yellow.

Facts You Might've Missed

The Yanks are looking forward to the opening of the World Series in the Stadium because they have won the big majority of their home games this season . . . There are more kids out for the Malden High football team than Eddie Casey succeeded for his Harvard squad; 200 plus being on the school squad . . . And now the speakeasies in New York have to have a victualler's license or they can't serve free lunch . . . Sing Sing's eleven will use a version of the Rockne shift this fall . . . In Akron recently a court was asked to rule on whether a golf slice was a "nuisance" or an "act of God," and ruled in favor of the latter, heh, heh . . .

CASEY DRIVES SQUAD OF 51 GRIDMEN

Harvard's grid squad goes into its second day of drill this morning after having undergone a major operation during the initial set of workouts. At the close of the opening session Coach Eddie Casey lopped 44 names off his varsity list, delegating them to the second varsity, and retaining a first varsity of 51 players.

During the afternoon session he named his first, second and third elevens, and after the usual course of grass drill grounding in fundamentals, skeleton work charging, tackling and blocking, sent them through a long signal drill, which consumed the last 30 minutes of the day.

With the exception of time remaining before the opening contest hurts is imperative, and Casey drove his men at top speed throughout the afternoon and will continue to do so for the next week. His selections of the present squad is naturally permanent, time and several changes may be made before the Crimson goes into battle.

TEAM A STRONG

But right now the lineup of Team A looks to be as fine as he can pick from the squad in the present condition. Capt. Carl Hagman, the Crimson leader, is on the left wing. At left tackle Casey has Irad Hardy, All American tackle selection a year ago. The left guard berth is filled by James Easterley, who started the 1931 season in that position.

Roger H. Hallowell, of Readville retained his varsity center position. Hallowell is just about the classiest pivot man at Cambridge this year, with the experience gained in last season's campaign in addition, the former Milton Academy star has put on added poundage, which will be very valuable in the coming campaign.

LINE IS HEAVY

This gives the Crimson plenty of weight on the right side of the line. Added to Rogers' 205 pounds, Bancroft's 200 pounds and Nash's 195 pounds make an average of 215 lbs. On the left wing Capt. Hageman, weighing 177, is the lightest man in the entire frontier, and Hardy, 220 the heaviest. Easterly and Hallowell are practically on a par, with 187 and 185, respectively.

Harry Wells succeeds Barry Wood as director of the Team A backfield. Wells showed in great form about 10 pounds heavier than he was a year ago. He is listed to start at his old as good a passer and kicker as Wood was and is a better ball carrier. His punting in practice, despite the fact that it was the first time he had touched a football since last season, is good.

Jack Crickard, the ace of the Crimson attack, snares the left halfback duties with Dooly Peter. Crickard is counted upon to put the Harvard team across this season. He is a two-year member of the 1931 backfield who returned to college this fall.

NEVIN FULLBACK

The Team B lineup, although not quite as well known as the varsity, is very nearly as powerful. Gerard Piccot, of the crew, Bartlett and Stowell are the wings for this combination with Morris Koplow, of Dorchester and Francis Cavanaugh, varsity end last year, at the tackles; John Henley, weight star, Herman Gunther and Franklin Gardner, converted center, guards, and Warren Casey, 170-pound snapperback from Dedham high center.

SCRIMMAGE ON B. C. GRID CARD

Boston College varsity football players were ready today to go through a scrimmage, after an easy first day's work at the Heights. The opening game with Loyola of Baltimore is only two weeks from tomorrow and there is much to be accomplished in the meanwhile.

Dick Burke, George Trudell, Bill Trayner, Will Ryan, Tommy O'Neil, Pink Littlejohn, was selected for many All-American teams last year. Barring injuries, it's hard to see how he can be kept off the "All" lineup this year.

WINSTON, COBB TO WAR AGAIN FOR MACK

By JACK CONWAY

Unknown Winston and Walter Cobb will toss heavy punches once more at an Argonne A. A. show at the Arena on next Thursday night.

Eddie Mack has postponed his weekly fistic offering for two nights so as not to conflict with the primaries. The sergeant believes the noble politicians should have a night to themselves now and then.

Winston says he will buy plenty of pork chops after his next meeting with Cobb. He asserts the latter is a soft touch for him.

At Fenway Park the other night "Pork Chops" cut Cobb down in two heats. With the betting odds 100 to five against him.

The Unknown person is only 22 years of age. He started boxing at West Palm Beach, Fla. He brought North by Jack Hartford, boxing promoter who is teamed up with Leon M Mason of Meriden, C.

Winston was [illegible] fighter until he belted Cobb on the chin. Now it's pork chops morning, noon and night.

So What?

Now is the time for a good postmen to come to the aid of the party.

Next time you hear the doorbell ring twice that'll be the walking delegate exercising your congressman's franking privilege.

It's not too much to say the boys to be on their toes until November 8. With the salaries they get now, most of them are going around on their uppers, anyway.

Time was when the postman only had to carry these speeches around in his hand. Now he has to carry them around in his head.

If the carrier is going to spread the gospel in our block, they'll have to install dictaphones in the letter boxes.

It's a great idea, but there's just one hitch. Four out of every five voters have already lost the key. And the fifth moved away.

GREEN ATTACK COMPLICATED

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 16—Dartmouth gridmen were set for an afternoon drill today in preparation for the scrimmage session which is slated for tomorrow.

The complicated line and backfield shift is mixed with a passing attack which sent Bill Clark and Sam Fishman through a number of fancy plays.

EIGHT VETERANS ON THE JUMBO FIRST TEAM

As Coach Lou Manley started his third day of practice with the Jumbo gridmen at Tufts Oval, he indicated that his first team consists of eight veterans, and three sophomores. Fred Oliver and Gordon Grinnell are holding the end positions, and Roy Woodworth, another sophomore, is at right guard. All three were stars in last year's frosh eleven.

The daily double sessions continue throughout this week and next in an effort to have the boys in fine trim for the first game of the schedule on October 1 against Middlebury at the Oval.

Canadian Wrecks Jesse; Champion Off Form

ting touch seemed to desert him. He was frequently in trouble and had to win the 18th to square the match.

Ouimet outdrove Goodman on the first hole, but put his second into the rough short of the green, while Johnny fired a spoon into a trap to the right. Both came out rather poorly and took two putts for a half in fives.

Goodman was in another trap to the left of the second green, as his ball took a bad bounce. He exploded too strong and lost the hole to Ouimet's perfectly played par.

On the 376-yard third they bends around the woods. Ouimet came out of the short rough with a fine shot to the green to get a half in fours with the Nebraskan, who took two putts from 18 feet. They bagged the 163-yard fourth in par threes, both being well on the tee.

SOMERVILLE IN LEAD

Somerville went 1 up on the 165 yard fourth. Both were on the tee, Jesse putted eight feet from the cup and Somerville went six feet past. The Bostonian missed and Sandy got his down for the par three.

Ouimet faded his tee shot into the rough on the fifth hole and topped his second. He then ran his third dead to the pin, but Johnny got down a 15 foot putt for a birdie three to square the match.

The champion's chip was short but he got down in 2 putts for a par five and won as Johnny came out of the trap short then overplayed his chip shot, taking 2 putts for a six.

Ouimet's well-played four, featured by a fine pitch to 10 feet of the cup, clinched the 349 yard seventh and put him 2 up. Johnny's second bounced over the green but his third was nine feet from the cup and he missed the putt.

Goodman ran down a 20 foot putt for a birdie on the 355 yard eighth to win back a hole France took 2 putts from 25 feet.

SINK 18 FOOTER

Goodman also got down a 15 footer for a birdie on the 179-yard ninth, but his par five was not good enough to win and square the match. Ouimet took three putts from 10 feet missing his first by two feet and then failing to get down the little one.

Goodman out	554	336	833—37

Both got birdies on the 378 yard hole, Goodman getting down from 10 feet and Ouimet then holing from nine feet.

The only difference on the 11th was that both took two putts for another half, in par fours.

TAKES THREE PUTTS

Francis after getting down a five footer to save his half on the 11th. Took three puts from 25 feet on the 12th and went 1 down. Johnny's second was only 12 feet from the pin, but two putts gave him the win. Ouimet's second putt was partly stymied and he hit Johnny's ball.

Goodman saved a half on the short 13th with a remarkable recovery. He put his tee shot in a deep bunker but was in perfect playable lie, but Johnny backed in, took a half swing and holsted the ball to the green and down from the cup. He almost got this putt down but the four was good enough to win a hole. Ouimet was in a trap, came out 15 feet away and took two putts.

For the second time on the inward nine, Ouimet and Goodman halved in birdies, as each got fours on the 600-yard 14th. Both pitched their thirds almost dead to the pin Johnny getting down a six-footer and Francis four, three feet.

Goodman's drive on the 15th was trapped his second shot and in the rough. Ouimet got well on two and won with a par four, squaring the match as Johnny took three putts to get down.

OUTDRIVEN ON 1ST HOLE

Somerville was outdriven by 20 yards on the 421-yard first hole, but won it with a par 4, sticking a spoon shot to within 10 feet of the cup, after which Guilford put his No 2 iron into a trap. Jesse had a 12-foot putt left for a 5 but missed.

After outdriving Somerville 70 yards on the 433-yard second Guilford was short with his iron and saved a half only by chipping with in two feet of the cup. Somerville within 12 feet of the cup with two good shots, took two putts.

Somerville's drive looked into the woods on the third hole. He played out short and wound up with a 5. Guilford banged a 272 yard drive, pitched on nicely and won with a par 4 to square the match.

IN TRAP

Big Jesse had a mere 250-yard drive on the 443-yard fifth, and fired his second into a trap at the right. Somerville did the same thing but exploded beautifully to within two feet of the pin to get his four and win. Guilford missed from five feet and was 2 down.

On the 530-yard sixth, where he got an eagle three yesterday, Guilford put his tee shot out of bounds trying to clear the barn, the fourth hooked into the rough on the adjoining fairway. But he chipped close to the pin.

Straight all the way, Somerville was well on in three, hit the cup with his try for a birdie, but won the hole with a par five, to become 3 up.

Guilford drove into the rough on the seventh hole, trying to clear the bend, but had a clear shot and pitched 12 feet from the pin, sinking his putt for a birdie three to win. Somerville sliced his approach to the right and came on 20 feet from the cup.

Guilford almost drove the 355 yard eighth green, his ball stopping only 50 feet short. Somerville failed to reach the green with his pitch, but almost holed out his third, a chip shot. The Canadian got a half as Jesse approached 10 feet away and missed the putt.

SINKS 8 FOOTER

Big Jesse then got down an 8-footer to salve the short nine after overplaying the green. Sandy was well on and took two putts to remain 2 up to the turn.

Morning round:

Par out	4 4 4 3 4 5 4 4 3—35
Guilford out	5 4 4 4 5 6 5 4 5—38
Somerville out	4 4 5 3 4 5 5 4 4—37

(Somerville 2 up).

Guilford outdrove Somerville 40 yards off the 10th, but again pitched poorly, his shot going into the thick grass over the green. He was 15 feet from the cup on his third and missed. Somerville, 12 feet away on his second, took two putts and went 3 up again.

Somerville rapped in a 25-foot putt to win the 11th and got 4 up. Sandy's drive was on a slope and his second was short, but the long putt saved his par. Jesse just missed the water hazard with his tee shot then half-topped the next. The ball hit the water and skimmed over but his third was also poorly played and he took a 6.

Their par fours on the 12th were uneventful, both being well on with their approaches. The "Siege Gun" got back ka hole on the short 13th, with a well-played par 3. Somerville's tee shot fell short of the green and he came on nine feet short, missing the putt.

They halved the long 14th, both being in the clear all the way.

Guilford was short of the 15th green, however, and Somerville in a trap. oSith recovered enough to get another half in fives, as the Canadian rembired 3 up

BOTH DRIVE 240 YARDS

Both drove 240 yards on the 442-yard 16th. Somerville pitched to the bank of the green, Guilford went into a trap, came out beautifully to within three feet of the cup, but missed the putt and the Canadian was inside with his approach putt and won the hole with a 4 to 5 up to-do.

The Canadian in the short rough off the tee on the short 17th chopped it to within 24 inches of the pin to get his par 3. He went 5 up as Guilford, in another trap, scooped to within four feet and missed.

Somerville went 6 up on the home hole where he played two fine shots to the green and sank a neight footer for a birdie three Guilford was well on. 15 feet away but missed the putt.

Somerville in	444	453	435—36—73

A Letter to Our Nan Down on the 5 Farms Where Birdies Sing.

They Missed the War And That's a Pity! What's All About It?

WHY CAN'T OUIMET WIN, NAN?

Evening American Correspondent,
Five Farms Golf Club,
Baltimore, Md.
Dear Nancy:

How are they going to keep you down on the Farms now that we've got McKee?

Well, Nan, I take my pen in hand to write you these few lines, and if your husband finds out about it, are your cheeks going to be red? But they always are, anyway, so he won't know the difference. Come to think of it it must be great for a gal to have nice pink cheeks—nobody can tell when she's blushing.

You golf scribes have got me all mixed up again, so I am writing you for a little inside information on that national amateur tournament you all have been waving so elegantly about. Of course, I'm a little young to understand more than the elementary principles of golf. But I think it's a good thing for us representatives of flaming youth and the lively sports to know a little something about it so that we can discuss it with our elders at the dinner table, don't you?

Therefore I have read all the stories out of Baltimore with zest and with deep enjoyment, too. You golf writers sure can put it on good, what with nearly every green being "an emerald gem set in an azure sea" and some shot or other being "the sheer gauze of the stuff comprising a duffer's dream" and Ouimet being "a wary, bespectacled old man marching up the hill to a lonesome interloc!"

Don't get me wrong, Nan, I like it. I think it's great. But I was just thinking it was a bad break for history you folks weren't down there in Maryland when Jeb Stuart rode through there in his grey shell jacket and scarlet sash, with the gay plume of his campaign hat bobbing in the golden Indian summer haze.

Sweeney would have been riding behind the General plunking on his banjo and Stuart would have been singing: "If you want to have a good time, jine the cavalry." (Look! Look! You've got me doing it!) But what I was going to point out was that if you can make an amateur golf tournament red like this, just think what you could have done to the Civil War!

He Rates the Best Figure

But to get on to the point of my letter, the thing that's worrying me and beginning to keep me awake nights, it's this.

All of you covering the tournament have been raving about that grand old man, Francis Ouimet. (I get you, he's 37.) And telling about his almost miraculous, record breaking round of 30 against Voigt, his sensational recoveries, his gameness, his coolness, his marvelous competitive background which goes back nearly 20 years. And then, all of you have invariably wound up saying: "But, of course, he can't win. He is wonderful, but that would be too much to expect. It is enough that he fought the good fight over the rolling Five Farms hills and finished as a game man should."

Taking him right out of the dope book and off his past performances, he's the best "hoss" in the field, isn't he? To be sure, the best horse doesn't always win. Nor the best ball team. That's why the Cubs may beat the Yankees in the coming World Series But all you can do in any sport is make the "figure horse" favorite and then hope that class will tell and that form will be adhered to.

Much is why I can't understand you golf folks being so sure and so sure that the amateur crown won't still be sitting on the Francis when this tournament is over. And just to show you how strongly I feel that way I'm going to pick him. Now watch him blow.

The Other Guy Can't Hurt You

Another thing that always puzzles me about golf and golfers is the way you talk about one player putting the pressure on another, one out-gaming or out-generaling him and all that.

What little I know about it, it doesn't look like that sort of game to me. In baseball, or football, or tennis or boxing you make it so you play the other fellow's game. He may have enough stuff on the ball to make you do it. But never in golf. At least, not as I understand it.

Suppose in the coming World Series with two out and the bases full of Yankees Lou Gehrig steps into one and hits a fast ball on the trade-mark. He's hit a perfect shot. It is as far as Gehrig can as he wanted to. But . . . and here's the rub. Charley Ehmke goes up like an express elevator, strikes his golden hand practice into the skatespeare record about that and comes down with the ball.

But on the golf course of Ouimet meets one coming up a dark alley and says into it for all he knows, can George Voigt or Chick Evans or somebody chance to be playing? Can he turn out and catch it in a butterfly net? You know he can't, Nan.

And while this may sound more than a little silly it is to me the weakness in golf. Once a guy really has the game licked he has nothing to fear from his opponent. That I have always contended that the nearer a Robot a golfer got to be the better he would be. And who wants to watch a Robot?

Regards to the Cows and Chickens

But there, Nancy, the first I know you'll be thinking I'm knocking your game and that wasn't my intention at all. I was just trying to show you why I can't get steamy about it. No doubt the fault is with me. Golf must be great, otherwise there wouldn't be so many golfers—and so many golf readers.

And now Nan, tell me, do you have pies like Granny Rice used to bake down there at the Five Farms? And do you feel at home among the cows and chickens? And . . . sssshhhh, how's the cider?

Keep writing those good yarns. Sincerely—Bill

QUINCY GAME TRYOUT FOR NEW SHIFT

When Benny Friedman's Brooklyn Dodgers come to Braves Field, Oct. 2, to open the local professional grid season with Coach Lud Wray's Boston Braves, that club is going to find itself facing something that acts like a jig-saw puzzle on the lineup.

Because the same . . . of the Braves [illegible] . . . will be using the Notre Dame shift, which is a variation of the Notre Dame system, and which has been revised this year by Hunk Anderson and Jones.

The Braves ran the Yanks in the Notre Dame system in an exhibition game the first time they used it, and it was a sight to behold. The backfield men shifted from one position to another, and the ends moved up and down the line of scrimmage. The Braves ran the Yanks dizzy.

FORMATION FOOLS FOES

It is not yet known how the Braves will use the shift against the Dodgers, but it is expected that they will use it frequently. The defensive backs will be shifted from one position to another, and the ends will move up and down the line of scrimmage. The Braves ran the Yanks dizzy.

SHIFT TESTED SUNDAY

The Braves will use the shift when they meet the Dodgers in Brooklyn on Sept. 25. The Braves will use the shift when they meet the Dodgers in Brooklyn on Sept. 25. The Braves will use the shift when they meet the Dodgers in Brooklyn on Sept. 25.

Worcester, Sept. 16—Capt. John J. McEwan sent through a stiff scrimmage his Holy Cross football candidates when he kept them at scrimmage more than 45 minutes.

In the kicking workouts he uncovered a fine prospect in Bill Halloran of Quincy, a reserve quarterback with the freshmen last season.

Walter Clifford, Roslindale, a strong candidate for first-string quarterback, was in the infirmary today because of a heavy cold.

CUBS' GRIMM AND PIRATES' CHOLLY SAME GUY

RABBIT'S PAL NOW A BOSS, NOT GRIMM

It surprises some folks no little to note that Charles Dillon named Charlie Grimm as manager of a club that is going to do something or other in the World Series of 1932.

The popular idea concerning a world series pilot is that he gets grand ovations when he is docked with a great number of years possessed of severity and the years of a major general and Mr. Grimm does not fit into any such picture at all.

PAL OF OUR RABBIT

In the wonder seasons Mr. Grimm together with Mr. Wilcy Maranville was a member of the Pittsburgh Pirates when they escaped into New York in the racing days of summer with a seven-game lead and, before the party escaped town [illegible] and [illegible] so effectively that added about club won the pennant.

None can place the thumb upon the exact blokes who were responsible for this collapse of the Pirates, but it often has been whispered, and then yelled right out loud that the acrobatic Mr. Maranville who [illegible] frog in the middle of the night, and who once was very fond of brew, home-made or otherwise, joined up with Mr. Grimm in escapades.

WORE A TRICK HAT

In those days Mr. Grimm wore a frick hat, with which he did many tricks for the amusement of onlookers. He played a bang with great eclat as well as his finger tips or something, and with Mr. Maranville and other boyhoodish playmate, Mr. Grimm gladly assumed the role and joined with Mr. Maranville in doing anything that Mr. Maranville thought the [illegible] in a minute.

[illegible] Mr. Maranville [illegible] sent [illegible] place Mr. Maranville [illegible] up with Mr. Grimm in hop-scotch, button, button, who's got the button, please [illegible] old-fashioned games, which were quite harmless and [illegible] to get [illegible] Mr. Maranville [illegible] dinner.

After prolonged study scientists have come to conclude that giggling ball player [illegible] their best and being [illegible] the Buccaneering crew, the consequences of these hilarious [illegible] did not affect [illegible] Pirates in [illegible] interests.

NOT A CAPT KIDDO

In the [illegible] Mr. Grimm having [illegible] Kid Gleason [illegible] and feeling [illegible] no longer [illegible] upon him to be a [illegible] Captain Kidd, or Lt. Kidd [illegible] and allow wave [illegible] in red fashion [illegible] evening [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible].

But he still [illegible] [illegible] a canny [illegible] and never [illegible] [illegible] which he twangs when the lights are low.

All in all, Mr. Grimm has gobs and gobs of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] not [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] he could [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

Therefore [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Grimm of the Cubs [illegible] Cholly of the Pirates [illegible] not be jolted [illegible] Mr. Charles Grimm [illegible] of the Chicago Cubs [illegible] [illegible] of Cholly the [illegible] these [illegible] glad [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

BRIEF SLUMP KEPT TRIBE FROM 2D PLACE

BRAVES CAN END SEASON ON 3D RUNG

By JOE CASHMAN

Every day in every way it becomes more apparent that their last disastrous Western trip alone prevented our gallant Braves making a serious pennant bid this season.

Eight straight defeats they suffered staging the jaunt and they brought it to a close by dropping four more decisions in a row.

If they could have broken even in those dozen starts an hour ago they would now be in second place and closer to the top than are the Pirates who trail by five games.

This is not said in criticism of the Tribesmen. Far from it. They have greatly exceeded the hopes of their most optimistic followers and are deserving of nothing but praise, and plenty of that, for what they have accomplished to date.

JINX STOPPED TRIBE.

And the fact that two short weeks of erratic play is the only reason why Bill McKechnie and his boys aren't assured of finishing in second place leads us to believe that next season, with Jordan and Holland available from the start and Worthington back in action, they will be in the thick of the fling hunt all the way, if they have a few breaks.

Few teams have been more unfortunate than the Braves this season. One had slump knocked them out of the race in early July. Before Urbanski, Worthington, Hargrave and Knothe cost them plenty of games as a row, they were playing their best ball of the campaign they can't gain an inch in the ten heats, and it neared rivals above have passed out exactly the same time to do a little spurting.

WARRIORS HIT .863 CLIP.

During the current home stand the Warriors have won 11 out of 13 games which is 863 baseball is much better than the league and Big Cobs have played for first and second. And yet today the pat-ted then retires trail the fourth place Reds by two games, the same distance they were behind the first day on when they returned home.

The St. Louis Cardinals come to the W ewam tomorrow to start an interesting three-game National League season. There'll be a single tilt tomorrow and a twin-bill Sunday.

The Braves expect to crash up in the east and clinch the third place Cubs take two out of three from the fourth-placers which seems likely.

HEADED FOR THIRD PLACE.

And next week the Warriors are going on against a stiff schedule on fourth while Cubs are pairing the Giants and the Phils are taking the Dodgers and then climbing up to third on Thursday when Dodgers on the last two days of the season.

Taking the first two games from the Pirates profited the Braves nothing. When they could have picked up a game on Brooklyn they had to surrender 3 to 2, yesterday.

For seven innings Hi-ne Meine held them scoreless while the Bucs were finding Hoyt, Betts for runs, but the home boys never stopped fighting.

They put over two runs in the eighth and in the ninth they had the tying run on second and the winning run on first with nobody out.

GUN AIMS FOR CROWN

Jesse Guilford of Boston, amateur golf king in 1921, may be headed for another title, at Five Farms in Baltimore. Today he meets Ross Somerville of Canada in a semifinal. The Siege Gun's pal, Francis Ouimet, defending champ, faces Johnny Goodman. An all-Boston final is quite possible. (International News Photos.)

Sharkey weighed 212 pounds when he appeared on the scales before starting his workout which consisted of three rounds of bag punching and some foot exercise. That is only seven pounds more than Sharkey weighed the night he won the title from Max Schmeling.

The champion spent the summer on the Isle of New Hampshire and Maine. He tramped mountain through the woods and kept himself pretty well in shape.

The go-night ought would also go into hand play if the scrappy Sharkey for patronage. He pulls a few woods with their silence and health giving qualities.

Sharkey says he will tune up again today. Later on he may do a little sparring.

Londos Much Upset

JIM LONDOS is apparently quite upset since his former relation-ship with Toots Mondt and Jack Curley. At New Haven the other night Londos tied up a show with a protested against Charley Winters acting as referee of his bout with Pat O'Shocker. Londos was booed O'Shocker so often that one ...ree ...ee ...ount. Ye Jim on to ...ed ...n entering the ring with him at New Haven on the ground that he was to be given the works.

The Connecticut Athletic Commission stood behind its referee and Londos finish went on with the bout. Jim won with an airplane spin.

Toots and Jack Londos to enter a ring with the old Stranger. The latter is far past the peak of his wrestling career but he still owns he is good enough to beat Londos once more. If he can Louis has pinned Londos a dozen times. Rather consistent.

Another Ring Surprise

ANDY CALLAHAN, New England lightweight champion, came through with another boxing upset when he stopped Young Lefty of Hartford in a round. Callahan was favored to win on points but it was not believed he would be able to annex Lefty out. The latter had beaten Joe Lynch of Providence and was headed for the first heights when he bumped into Callahan.

150 IN HUNT FOR LATIN BERTHS

Shooting for a second city football title, Charlie Fitzgerald of Boston Latin has one of the largest grid squads in the history of the school romping around the Fens stadium these afternoons.

Today Charlie has a group of 150 candidates. At the start of the season Fitzgerald gave out 75 uniforms and that were available.

Another 75 candidates were turned away when the last pair of moleskins went out with a final candidate given the regretful message to go home.

Clad in moth-eaten suits and last year's school suits the lucky ones continue to shove heads of dirt and skill practice under Fitzgerald's direction. How can you lick a team like that?

ROUCHE QUARTET.

In addition to Capt. Dave Gavin Lyons, Edward Jackie Jones is Quarterback Hank Rouche. Half backs Tom Shehan and Lenny Lee in Louis Sanford. Others who have had some experience are Adams, Brandi, George Chapman Red Hose and Jack Hood.

Then there is a goody number of ex-subs who are expected to be first stringers this season. This list includes Frankie Donovan Frank Leary, who broke his collar bone last year and was out most of the season, Bowen, Guy Harris, Brown and Hatton Dugwood.

Wearing a Purple uniform this season in John O'Neil has now a few to see and hop for the honors at a neat 208 pounds.

EDDIE O'BRIEN, JR. OUT.

Some famous names are represented on the list of prospective candidates at Latin this season. There is Joe O'Hare whose brother Bob, a mere Dartmouth wing king for a big Green team. Then there is Elsie O'Brien, Jr. whose brother Eddie, Jr. the boy wonder in football, graduated last June, nephew of the Boys Mar...ette star, is now showing his stuff to Fitzgerald.

Incidentally Coach Fitzgerald is looking around for a football graven stone than the Fens Stadium. The surface already is as hard as cement and about as suitable for grid practice.

The Latin school coach would like to work his teams on some grassy area. He is thinking of taking the boys to Franklin Field or Russell Field.

SILLY TO GIVE AMERICA AWAY, FACTS REVEAL

By B. C. FORBES

This column repeatedly emphasized that almost everything was selling at utterly absurd prices. As President Whitney of the New York Stock Exchange expressed it, people were "giving America away."

Around mid-year some semblance of sanity set in. For two months the general trend was upwards.

Another spasm of selling at sinking prices has been unleashed. Some timid souls fear that things will tumble further than ever.

Happily those conversant with the facts national and international, those possessing understandings of the momentous difficulties overcome abroad and at home, look for no such needless, unwarranted tragedy.

Dollar Sold for Half-Price

Towards mid-year, when prices and sentiment were still slumping, I took an inventory to decide into the actual worth of stocks which had been particularly viciously slaughtered. The facts uncovered were astounding.

Gold dollars were being pressed for sale at less than 50 cents.

This week came official news of the sale of the White Motor Co. to Studebaker. The fantastically unwarranted quotation ruling for White Motor shares was uncovered by the calculations made several months ago.

Taking 5 for 8 No Bargain

"Suppose you were the owner of a large manufacturing business. Like many others, you lost money in 1931; the immediate prospects are not encouraging; you feel pessimistic and willing to sell out—cheap. Suppose a purchaser asks you for your statement. You show him a healthy balance sheet indeed. It shapes up something like this:

Cash, United States government bonds	$ 8,500,000
Receivables, merchandise	15,000,000
Factories, real estate, etc.	14,000,000
	$37,500,000
Owing for current acts	1,300,000
Net worth	$36,200,000

"The purchaser makes you a bid of $5,000,000 for your business—the cash, Liberty Bonds and everything else included. Would you sell? No one in his right mind would exchange 8½ millions in cash for five million dollars, to say nothing of the 28 millions more in other assets.

"But the many owners of White Motors stock who sold out between $7 and $8 per share did that very thing.

"The figures given represent White Motors condition on December 31, last. At $7½ per share, the company's 850,000 shares were selling for $4,800,000—about 60 per cent of the cash equivalent alone, and only one-fifth of the net quick assets. There were no capital obligations ahead of the common stock.

"There are literally dozens of other companies which also have a quoted value less than their cash in the bank. And more significant still, an amazingly large percentage of all industrial companies are selling for less than their quick assets alone—leaving out their plants and other fixed assets entirely.

"This means that a great number of American businesses, in the best judgment of Wall Street, are more dead than alive."

Score of Stocks Underpriced

Among the stocks which were then selling for less than their cash assets were cited:

Amer. Car & Fdry. Pfd.	Marlin Rockwell
Amer. Locomotive Pfd.	Motor Products
Amer. Steel Found. Pfd.	Munsingwear
Amer. Woolen Pf.	Nash Motors
Congoleum	N. Y. Air Brake
Howe Sound	Opp'lee Collins
Hudson Motors	Reo Motors
Hupp Motors	S. O. of Kansas
Lima Locomotive	Stewart Warner
Magma Copper	White Motors

Studebaker has just offered the equivalent of five times the bottom quotation for White Motor shares.

Going "Haywire" Inexcusable

If America was able to catch hold of itself three months ago, there would be infinitely less excuse for its going "haywire" now that so much genuine progress has been made toward financial stability and economic sanity both abroad and at home.

Giving America away is senseless.

NEW ENGLAND BUILDING OVER 1932 AVERAGE

By FRANK H. MELOON

The upturn in New England's new building, made known in this column on Friday of last week is being continued, according to figures sent us by F. W. Dodge Corporation, New York. Last week the total of New England building contracts awarded in the week ended Sept. 15 was $1,187,700. This week's total as of late as noon Sept. 16 was $1,413,800. As we stated last week it is true that the upturn must be sustained to present major significance, but in these times successive weeks' showing above the weekly average afforded well-defined rays of cheer.

That a consolidation of the present stock market position is to be expected after the severe break which wiped out almost 50 percent of the gains from the July lows. Sudden sinking spells are a possibility in the next session or two as the bear crowd is encouraged to continue selling. These should not carry general prices down under the 60 level on the Dow-Jones 30 industrial level.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

RALLYING today was also [illegible] lacking in the [illegible] that characterized the early stages of the [illegible] recoil as might be expected after the severe recent joint experienced by reckless speculators. Ratio acted best, influenced by apparently [illegible] reasonably good showing in the earloadings report to be issued tomorrow.

A. & P. Sales for Recent Weeks Given

Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. today reports sales for the five weeks ended September 3 of $77,[illegible] compared with $93,983,527 in the [illegible] a decrease of 17.6 per cent. For the 35 weeks ended September 3 sales were $463,331,999 against $541,173,401, a decrease of 14.4 per cent. Tonnage sales for the five weeks ended September 3 were 34 per cent below a year ago and were down 44 per cent for the 35 week period.

Next Few Weeks To Give Answer

There has been a suspicion that business was being manipulated so as to stock markets in the early part of its advance, the idea being that if business showed a substantial improvement before the Maine election nor the stock market's slump should have any de-erring effect.

Endicott-Johnson's Earnings Estimated

Current estimates place Endicott-Johnson's net per share for the fiscal year ending November at $1.75, compared with actual income of $4.84 for the 11 months to November 28, last year.

Crops to Benefit Northern Pacific

Despite the small influence which earnings have exerted on recent stock price movements, fairly positive predictions are being heard that Northern Pacific operations for the final months of this year will reflect the results for the same period 1931. This opinion is obviously based on the relative size of the spring wheat crops during both seasons.

Harvest Estimated at Double 1931 Yield

The current harvest is estimated to be [illegible] double the 1931 yield. In connection it is significant that in 1931 agricultural products accounted for slightly over 23 per cent of Northern Pacific's total freight traffic and of this proportion 10.68 per cent represented wheat.

Westinghouse Pool Bought Heavily

During the sharp decline earlier in the week the bull pool in Westinghouse Electric is understood to have bought considerable more stock than it had thought necessary to stem the reaction.

Aircraft Changes Closely Watched

Opinion is pretty general throughout brokerage circles that the late wide advance and ensuing abrupt fall in United Aircraft is due to a peculiar situation within the current market for the stock. No one seems willing to explain the nature of this, but everyone seems to hold the incident responsible for turning the trend of the whole list. It is very apparent that this year's indicated share earnings hardly could create the spectacular activity in fact, Street talk is that income for 1932 will barely approximate $1 a share.

Socony-Vacuum Earnings Lower

Socony Vacuum profits have been rather materially reduced in recent months, according to one survey, because of price shading in some of the big eastern consumption areas. At the same time, firm prices for crude oil, of which the company is a large purchaser, also affected its profits. Moreover, the company's foreign operations were confined under unsatisfactory conditions abroad.

Union Pacific Rise Stimulating

Many observers were distinctly gratified by the recovery in Union Pacific. This issue has been one of the prime favorites of Rockefeller [illegible] in the American market, and its strength was interpreted by the bulls as a sign of renewed foreign buying here.

Union had a substantial reaction from its best recent price, so that stocks from such [illegible] cations it has been entitled to some recovery.

Chartist's Idea of Steel Common

One of the nation's most successful chartists expressed the belief that Steel common "showed lack of faith on the part of its sponsors when it sold under 44." He will not be impressed with its recuperative possibilities until the stock regains that level "and holds it for some time."

Bethlehem Pool Shows Vigor

Pool in Bethlehem Steel seemed to be the most vigorous of any steel stock group in capitalizing the rumor of the vast railroad orders which rumor had it would be financed by the government.

Continental Baking Income $272,773

Net income of Continental Baking Corp. and subsidiaries after all charges, including depreciation, interest and taxes, for five weeks ended July 23, 1932, was $272,773, equivalent to 58 cents a share on 472,078 shares of $8 preferred stock. For the 30 weeks net income was $1,747,514, equal to $3.60 a share on the preferred stock. Last year Continental did not report for the five weeks period.

Preferred dividend requirements at the $8 rate to which the stock is entitled amount for the five weeks to $367,000 and at the $6 rate now in effect amount to $288,000, indicating the present rate covered by earnings of the latest five weeks.

Union Bag & Paper Orders "Very Heavy"

New York, Sept. 16 (AP)—Orders of Union Bag & Paper Corp. have been "very heavy" in the past month, says John Wohnefeder, vice president. September output is at a higher rate than the average production of "any other period in the company's history," he asserted, and several factories are working day and night shifts.

SPECTATOR

Says:

The stock market is hovering around one of its most important historical test points. This is the $60 level in the Dow-Jones price index, or average for 30 industrial stocks. The market has broken this level only three times in the last 28 years, and has never for long stayed below that point. The market last night closed at $67.94 in this price average, a net gain on the day of $2.05. Earlier in the day it had been down to a new low for the current reaction.

Wall St. Less Shaky

Quite a few are still looking for the decline to wipe out 50 per cent of the July-August rebound, which would bring the industrial averages around to around 60. The majority would welcome a period of quiet and irregularity.

Europe, especially Paris and Holland, was said to have been big short sellers in recent sessions, which suggests that the [illegible] interest has increased considerably.

Brokers' Loans

The gain of $62,000,000 in brokers' loans for the week reveals a tremendous amount of distribution in the last two weeks. This may be a shock to the bulls and cause a readjustment of their perspective for the time being.

It may well be that the pools are largely responsible for the loans' rise. Some are said to be pretty well loaded up, which may cause trouble later.

* * *

Wall St is wondering when the so-called Cape Cod boys are planning to cover the shorts they sold in the last week and if they can get out at them at the handsome profits they show now . . . Some estimates place the total of this bear account alone at 500,000 shares, which is a lot of stock and probably exaggerated . . .

Typewriter Sales Show an Increase

Tapering Demand Noted for Steel

New York, Sept. 16 (AP)—The Iron Age, in an analysis of steel consumption since the World War says demand has been "tapering" concluding that the rate of growth in future years may not be as rapid as in the past.

"Whatever the seasons," asserts the review, "our year-by-year increase in production per capita of population seems to be of a diminishing order, with substantially static condition indicated in the [illegible] future, unless meanwhile some large new uses for steel are found."

MODERATE RISE REGISTERED IN WALL ST.

New York, Sept. 16—Important shares managed to register a moderate rise in today's trading in Wall St. Rails made the best showing as a group, in anticipation of another seasonably improved carloadings report to be made public tomorrow noon.

Net gains of 4 points came for a handful of shares.

STEEL 15 BACKWARD

U. S. Steel again acted hesitantly, and was churned around in the afternoon close to unchanged, or close, part of the time showing fractional setbacks.

Another "short squeeze" appeared to have started in International Business Machines, as it shot up 4 points. J. I. Case lost most of a gain of 2¾ points.

In the carrier group, Lackawanna gained more than 3 points. Cheasapeake & Ohio, Union Pacific, Atchison and Chesapeake Corp. lifted between 1 and 2 points.

Liggett & Myers B rose more than 6 points. Gains of over 2 points came for Air Reduction, International Harvester, Allied Chemical, Chrysler, Eastman Kodak, Drug and Johns Manville. Trading was quiet.

The list went through an easy first hour with scattered selling sending leaders down 1 to 2 points. American Telephone showed little support until it slipped nearly 2 points. U. S. Steel was under pressure and the rest of the list drifted lower. There was a tendency to attribute the first hour selling to the bonus vote but lack of volume robbed this of its argument.

The market showed support at the end of the first hour and went into a rally which brought the list back to yesterday's close. Some issues, notably Canadian Pacific, were strong and showed good-sized gains.

COMMODITIES STEADY

A steady tone in commodities was a supporting factor. Bonds did little. United Corp. was outstanding in the utilities with a gain of a full point.

Seasonal expansion in trade continued at an accelerated pace during the past week, the weekly merchants' review reported today.

"Many lines are below a year ago in activity, but it is encouraging that they are now moving upward and, in numerous cases, are better than at any time this year," said Bradstreet's.

"The reports indicate that the increased activity in wholesaling and light manufacturing lines is being sustained. Textile activity, of course, is well above a year ago and shoe manufacturing is apparently holding its own.

"Retail merchants are continuing to stock conservatively, as public buying is still somewhat spasmodic. Cool weather throughout a large part of the country, however, has given a temporary impetus to fall marchandise and on those lines there is an increasing response."

Dun's reported a continued acceleration in the movement of most retail lines, the contributing factors being seasonal weather, demand arising from school openings and appearance of a broader support for advancing prices.

"The rapid depletion of inventories," asserted the review, "is already has forced the buying policies of retailers to become more liberal, some of the department store executives announcing increases in budget purchases to meet requirements that have been developed by the improvement in business conditions."

RADIO FOOTBALL PLANS

Ted Husing Has Grid Games Assigned

By N. F. T.

So far as one Ted Husing figures, which is quite far and ahead at times, nothing will hold back football activity on the air unless it's the calendar. Ted is just waiting and as usual, rarin' to go.

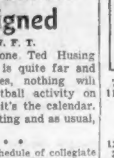
A tentative schedule of collegiate games to describe appears to have taken shape. Although not absolutely set, it's quite definite. Here's how it looks:



Ted Husing

HUSING'S HOPES

Sept. 24th, Columbia vs. Middlebury. Oct. 1, Notre Dame vs. Western vs. Missouri. Oct. 8, Yale vs. Chicago. Oct. 15, Pittsburgh vs. Notre Dame. Oct. 22, Yale vs. Army. Nov. 5, Fordham vs. St. Mary's. Nov. 12, Notre Dame vs. Northwestern. Nov. 19, Navy vs. Notre Dame. Along in there Ted, of course, must allow for possible plans involving Harvard vs. Yale, Thanksgiving Day, Cornell vs. Pennsylvania. Nov. 26, Army vs. Notre Dame. Dec. 3, Army vs. Navy. Dec. 10, Notre Dame vs. Southern California.

• • •

So much for the Columbia Broadcasting System effort. Opposing NBC forces are depositing certain important clashes. Graham McNamee will have his work outlined for him any day.

• • •

NO NEED

An application for additional Kilowattage, filed with the Federal Radio Commission by Boston's WAAB, is reported as having been rejected this week on the basis of listeners through our area now having abundant service and adequate coverage.

• • •

That Salt Lake City speech of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt comes over both NBC and CBS facilities tomorrow night. It may be heard in New England by tuning to WB2 or WAAB between 10:15 and 11 p. m.

• • •

Mme. Frances Alda, one time Metropolitan Opera prima donna, soon accepts contracts for young classical vocalists with' radio aspirations.

• • •

As predicted here in your "colyums" an unprecedented turnout visited WEEI and WBZ last night. It was an admiring throng, eager for a glimpse of Rudy Vallee, Olsen and Johnson nad the "Green Pastures" group performing at the studios. Rudy again slipped in and out unseen.

FATHER

Adrian O'Brien, was the artist in that new offerstarted 13:32:30 last night. ming (WEEI) at 9 o'clock evening, but something must have happened . . . A big floral bouquet for the little lady named Lewis who wrote and directed her first "Reporter" sketch for newspaper life in fine fashion Wednesday night (WEEI) at 8:30. Meaning it was exceptionally well done . . . With all these political hits being aired hereabouts, the program department of the Yankee Network headquarters thought the "Senator Numb" burlesque broadcast was solemn and serious until after staff folk heard it coming through last night (WNAC) at 10:15 . . . Lew Conrad and his "Musketeers" open for fall dine and dance engagements in the Statler Hotel, with WEEI most likely hooking on Friday evening, Oct. 7th . . . Ruth Chilton, popular Hub studio songstress, says old time melodies draw more fan mail for her than ultra modern arrangements, despite Ruth's effective style of singing the latter type tunes . . . Wrens (WBZ) still on call your name across any room without noticeable lip movement and make you think it's coming from behind you. What's more, he likes to pull the clever bit upon sighting an acquaintance in a restaurant. Ask Oscar (WBZ) Elegant, the busy baton beats and measures man . . . What's become of Lee McCollum, who made so many friends with his poetic philosophy called "Sidewalks of Life" via WBZ waves last winter? We're minus a top-notch period featuring poems it seems, a fact hard to associate with old Boston.

Glassford's Statement Shows Hoover Policy Caused B.E.F. Tragedy

President Hoover is frantically seeking to shift responsibility from himself for the crime of July 28. He has failed to be able to do this by means of the grand jury. It DISAPPOINTED him. He hoped to do it through the secret service. Again he was DISAPPOINTED.

Now he seeks to do it through the Attorney-General. He has succeeded only in arousing a storm of NATIONWIDE INCREDULITY and ANGER.

When he represents the thousands of half-starved, unemployed, homeless and ill-clad World War veterans as dominated by "criminal, Communist and non-veteran elements" he creates a BOOMERANG that has already returned upon himself.

There need have been no rioting on July 28. RIOTING TOOK PLACE AS THE DIRECT RESULT OF HOOVER'S PERSONAL POLICIES.

He was warned that if those policies were persisted in rioting would result. After the first riot his agents were advised that the situation was in hand and could be held in hand PROVIDED THE HOOVER POLICY of FORCIBLE EVACUATION TOWARD THE B. E. F. WERE CHANGED. He refused to change that policy and provoked new riots.

Two veterans were killed as a result. Many others were wounded or gassed, as were women and children in B. E. F. camps. Many police officers were wounded and the lives of others were in jeopardy.

The troops were called. United States soldiers were brought up to attack World War veterans. A new page in American history was written with blood and fire in the nation's capital.

These are facts that stand out beyond the possibility of contradiction following General Glassford's reply to the Attorney-General's defense of President Hoover and his B. E. F. policy.

General Glassford had been handling the B. E. F. with consummate tact for two months. His police work during that time was as fine as anything ever achieved by the justly famous police of London.

When the order to force the men to evacuate the Pennsylvania Avenue camps was received, General Glassford warned President Hoover, through the District Commissioners, that there would almost certainly be trouble. The warning was ignored, the evacuation order was obeyed by the police and trouble resulted.

That was the first riot. When it was quelled the General consulted the commissioners and told them that the situation was in hand, provided no more attempts to force evacuation were made that day. He expressed the opinion that if such attempts were made it might THEN be necessary to call for troops.

The commissioners listened to his report and told him to hold the area that had been repossessed. No decision as to further action was taken, and General Glassford returned to the scene of trouble. There followed an isolated disturbance that was quelled within one minute, with the great bulk of the veterans maintaining order.

But the U. S. soldiers were already on their way. General Glassford knew nothing about it until he heard it as a matter of news. He had never asked for the troops and did not need them.

These are the facts. They place responsibility where it belongs. That is in the White House, SQUARELY UPON THE SHOULDERS OF THE PRESIDENT.

That responsibility President Hoover can in no wise shift. THERE HAD BEEN NO B. E. F. TROUBLE UNTIL HOOVER DECIDED UPON HIS POLICY OF VIOLENCE.

There had been no trouble in Washington until July 28.

Once before, it is true, tragedy had been near. That was when, in a moment of panic, VICE-PRESIDENT CURTIS HAD CALLED MARINES TO THE CAPITOL.

There would have been no B. E. F. tragedy had President Hoover held his hand.

Directors Must Direct

The directors of a Massachusetts corporation, after long litigation in court, have been assessed a sum, said to be in excess of $400,000, for their dereliction to duty in the affairs of the corporation.

The directors of some of the closed banks are being sued for similar cause, and we can safely assume there will be many similar cases at law ere the liquidation of these banks is completed.

Well, there ought to be. This business of directoring in business corporations has grown into a common joke, which would be humorous if the consequences upon the stockholders and investors were not so tragic and pitiful.

They do not know the affairs of these corporations, their problems or their future. They have no proper regard of their responsibility. They have no immediate sincere concern in the welfare of the investors for whom they are the trustees. They are only animated rubber-stamps and acrobatic fee collectors. A corporation could be rifled from the inside and the investments of the honest depositors squandered and they would know less about it than a goose about double-entry bookkeeping.

Perhaps the courts of Massachusetts will shake them up and get a sense of their obligation into their heads. Or do the courts have too much respect for a frock coat, spats, a polished cane and a director's pose of dignity?

What a Difference a Few Years Make!

Winter Comes Early in Maine

An early Winter comes to Maine,
A blizzard Democratic.
It chants a wild, triumphant strain
In accents quite emphatic.
And as the tempest roars and snorts
The boys have turned to Winter sports.

Gone is the patronizing smile
Of Old Man G. O. P.
A snowball smites his silken tile
And wrecks his dignity;
A gentle hint to make it plain

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—Thoughts while strolling:: I mix up Willard Keefe and Walter O'Keefe. Those pert bridal shops. Karl Kitchen has the set-up of a Potsdam guard. I always look away from a prison van. One-word description of Bernard Sobel—twitchy.

How the big banks, ha, ha, are now stressing, "No securities for sale." That queer eddy of wind on 57th street. If a taxidermist can come through a depression, the rest of us should. Jerome Beatty, a Lawrence, Kan., boy, who made good in the city. One of the town's grand old men—Adolphe Lewisohn.

Jules Bach somehow suggests Punch's picture of John Bull without side-burns. Those flurries of hope when the phone rings in a ticket agency. What has become of the talented Boardman Robinson? No one can look so world-weary as Earl Carroll. Or so electrically alert.

New York is becoming at full of bicycles as Rotterdam. William Stieg—a new Peter Arno. Somebody asks me for a recipe for paragraphing. Don Marquis expressed it perfectly years ago: "Make people think they think and they'll love you. Really make them think and they'll hate you."

Wonder if others like to ride on bus tops just to eavesdrop on young couples in front? There's a firm name for you—Stwing and Twyne. Bet Mr. Stwing lisps. Roxy talks always as though he were hoarse. Who remembers when they called an itinerant salesman a chapman?

Blossom Seeley doesn't look right without a neck fur. Manhattan is its best in 10 o'clock sunshine. And there's no place to watch it like a seat in an Astor window, watching the furious medley of Times Square cascading by. Or gazing over a parapet at the Empire.

* * *

Heigh ho and all that: Members of the fashionable jockey clubs are classed as employes and paid no federal tax on admissions this summer. And my sympathy is sincere for that sedate little Madison avenue book shop, whose two windows are always filled with bright-jacketed books, which had to display a window card: "This is not a drug store."

Sam Hellman spends most of his time in France these days, running over for a week now and then to lunch with magazine editors. On his most recent trip, he motored in to Paris from his villayet and having a few hours to spare made a round of the bistros. At about the tenth it came upon him to sing, so he lifted his voice in an aria familiar to the St. Louis levees. He found an audience in another merry-maker and arm in arm they sang from place to place until it was time for Hellman to entrain at the Gare St. Lazarre. Shaking hands with his compatriot, he remembered he did not know his name and asked it. "Titta Ruffo," was the reply, and it was none other than he.

Tin Pan Alley's new song writing duo, Gordon and Revell, have been compared already to Gilbert and Sullivan. But not many know that Revell, who is English, made his first hit in London writing an American tune. It was entitled: "Way Down South in Nebraska."

* * *

Some strays: Buster West is not only a crack golfer but a champ three-cushioned billiardist . . . Gene Fowler and Ben Hecht are finishing a play at Fire Island . . . Al Trahan, the comedian, was once a stereotyper in New Bedford, Mass., and, although left-handed, shoots 79 to 83 at golf . . . The Friars have the oldest club barber in town, Felix, 72, who has been there since the club opened . . . Walter O'Keefe, when a student as Notre Dame, boarded with Knute Rockne . . . J. J. Shubert is deadly afraid of cats.

* * *

No one ever believes my cat story. But it's true. Into the billiard room of the Gerdes, in Cincinnati, one wintry night there crept a black, bedraggled and meowing cat with the left ear in a fan-like gnawed stub and four white-tipped paws. A loafer, reversing the custom, trained it to jump in your lap at the cry of "Scat." Six months later on the stoop of a West 57th street boarding house in New York I told the story to fellow borders. When I repeated the cry of "Scat" a feline jumped out of the shadows into my lap. It was the Cincinnati cat or its spittin' image. And, I spent the rest of the night thumbing back my eyes.

A Dastardly Act of Desperate Politicians

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

SURELY IT IS NOT NECESSARY to interpret the sweeping Democratic victory in rock-ribbed Maine. Whatever they may say, the triumph has been a revelation even to the Democrats. They had hoped for a substantial reduction in the normal Republican majority, but their fondest hopes never have gone so far as a victory. The Hoover "general staff," as Ogden Mills calls the higher dignitaries of the Cabinet, hurried to Maine to hold the line; and Mr. Mills himself made a speech in Portland, pitifully inadequate as it was. But all to no avail. Maine has voted its opinion of the Hoover Administration; and at this moment it appears that two Republican Congressmen have lost their seats to Democrats. It is as though Mississippi had gone Republican. Even Mr. Coolidge's plea in the Saturday Evening Post for the continuation of the regime of which he was a part has gone unheeded in Maine. The voters there read it and understood that the author, sharing so heavily in the responsibility for the crash, was merely making a plea in self-defense.

This will be bad news for Wall Street.

Police Chief Refutes Hurley

Mr. Hoover and his "general staff," of which Ogden Mills speaks so admiringly, insist on playing politics with human misery. Not only has it sought, through the Mitchell "report" on the veterans in Washington, to picture them as criminals and Reds, but it appears, as we suspected, that the "report" is a campaign document having too little relation to the truth.

And here is proof enough for us.

The chief of police in Washington is Gen. Glassford. He owes his place to the Federal Government. He can be removed by pressure from the President. He commanded the admiration of the nation, and won the respect of the jobless veterans by the tact, the good sense, and the justice of his methods up until the time Hoover and Pat Hurley called in the army, the bayonets, the torches, and the tanks.

"Attorney-General Mitchell's report is at variance with the facts known to police."

And that means, in other words, that the Administration, having resorted to hysterical and extreme methods that have shocked the judicious, seeks to "frame" the veterans who fought for the Republic.

* * *

Campaign of Villification

We wonder just how long this campaign of villification against decent, industrious men and women who want work and are denied, is to continue, and how far the blunderers will carry it.

* * *

The vilest thing that has been done in America for generations was done in Maine last week. There are jobless men there as everywhere. These men are jobless from no fault of their own. They want work, beg for work, demand the right to work. But there is no work. And since there is no work there is no wage received. And when no wage is received a man must starve or accept charity in some form.

Now what happened in Maine?

Poor Jobless Refused Franchise

It is naturally assumed that not many of the jobless men and women are enamored of the Hoover Administration. The fear in Administration circles is that they will vote their resentment. This fear prevailed in Maine. And so the Hoover leaders in Maine put their heads together and conceived the brilliant notion of going to the courts and having all the jobless who had to accept bread from the local governments or starve pronounced "paupers," and refused the right to vote.

This hideous thing happened at Lewiston, Maine, where the Republican-controlled Board of Registration removed almost four hundred from the polling list—because they are out of work, unable to get jobs, and have been forced to accept assistance.

That comes as near to treason as anything we know.

It is enough to characterize the jobless veterans as "Reds," and "criminals" and "bums" without a sweeping characterization of the jobless as "paupers" to be denied their American right to express their opinion at the polls on the Administration that promised them a "chicken in every pot" and has put them beyond the pale of citizenship.

* * *

Stupidity of Arrogant Men

This, like the expulsion of veterans in Washington by [illegible] and tanks, is worse than a crime—it is a blunder. In every age and country in days of dire distress stupid, arrogant men without imagination or sense have made such blunders.

There are 11,000,000 jobless in America today. They are not "bums," they are not "paupers" in the accepted meaning of the word, they are not "criminals" and they are not "Reds." There may be some criminals among them—just as there are some criminals among the highly placed and the fortunate—but let them be dealt with as individuals. As Floyd Gibbons has said, even on the showing of Mitchell's campaign document against the jobless, there was a greater per cent of convicted criminals in the Cabinet of Mr. Harding in which Mr. Hoover sat than there was among the veterans in Washington.

There are just as good and patriotic Americans among the 11,000,000 jobless who have been forced to accept assistance from municipalities and counties as can be found in the Cabinet in Washington. It is a dastardly and a dangerous thing to put these men beyond the pale of citizenship and brand them as "paupers."

But whenever it is done or attempted the fact will be given the utmost publicity; thus shall we learn what the American people think of such tactics—such brutality and stupidity.

Just Folks

Zinnias

Old-fashioned Zinnias seem to me
Like certain patient friends and true,
Who seek no words of flattery
Nor any praise for what they do,
But are the first when sorrows fall

Who loves them dwells in constant fear
Of thoughtless word or icy blast.
The last contrary wind may send

But Zinnias have a sturdier way.
Wherever planted they will stay
And blithely go about their task.
Whatever winds or storms descend
On Zinnias you can depend.
